Japanese Troops Repulsed in Raid On Mongol Post

Manchu-Nippon Column Drives 7 Miles Into Soviet Area.

Russian Air Bombs Kill 8, Tokyo Says

Invaders Equipped With Planes and Tanks, Moscow Asserts.

Sparks in Eastern Asia, editorial—Turn to Page 8.

By the United Press.

Moscow (Friday), Feb. 14.—A Japanese-Manchukuoan attack Wednesday on Bulun-Dersu, in Outer Mongolia, in which 500 soldiers, with 20 trucks, two tanks and two airplanes participated, was reported today by Tass, official Russian news agency. Outer Mongolia is under Soviet protection.

Bulun-Dersu, a frontier post, is situated 4½ miles from the border. The report said the Japanese and Manchukuoan soldiers were armed with light and heavy machine guns, in addition to three field pieces.

Mongolian-Soviet frontier guardsmen resisted, the report said, but finally were compelled to retreat in view of their numerical inferiority and a flanking movement by the Japanese-Manchukuoan troops.

The Mongolians reportedly left behind one light field piece and a machine gun, which were taken by the invading forces.

The Japanese and Manchukuoan troops, the dispatch said, pursued the fleeing frontier guardsmen and penetrated 6 or 7 miles farther into the territory of the Mongolian people's republic.

However, the dispatch said, the Mongolian troops, with the aid of strong reinforcements, forced the invaders back to Manchuria.

One Mongolian guardsman was reported killed and seven wounded, while the Japanese and Manchurians were said to have suffered "not less" than 10 killed and approximately 20 wounded.

The Mongolian government reportedly sent a protest to the Manchukuoan government, demanding an immediate investigation of the incident and measures against the guilty persons. The note also reportedly demanded that Manchukuo take steps to prevent further invasions of Japanese and Manchurian troops into the Mongolian republic.

Airplane Raid Charged.

Tokyo, Feb. 13 (AP).—Japanese military reports that Outer Mongolia, under the influence of Soviet Russia, used bombing planes in the latest border clash with Manchukuoan-Japanese troops tonight added tenseness to an already delicate situation.

Military reports from the border said the planes attempted to bomb a Japanese-Manchukuoan column, which precipitated what was called the biggest battle of the year along the frontier.

A Japanese officer and seven Japanese soldiers, general headquarters at Hsinking, capital of the Japanese-sponsored state of Manchukuo, reported were killed in the clash.

A Domei (Japanese) News Agency dispatch from Hsinking said the Mancukuoan government was taking an extremely grave view of the incident, because "the enemy used bombing planes."

This attitude was expressed by a spokesman for the Manchukuoan foreign office. Accounts here differed as to whether two or three planes were used, and whether they were Russian or Outer Mongolian.

World 'Ends' Today, Toronto Pastor Says

Toronto, Feb. 13 (AP).—Harold R. Varney, former Methodist minister of Maine and founder of a small congregation which meets under the name of the Christian Church, in Toronto, said today he was convinced the world would end tomorrow.

He proclaimed the world would end before midnight and "the tall buildings of Toronto will be destroyed and the world consumed in cleansing fire."

"I'd hate not to be a good Christian right now," he said.

Varney said he realized there would be ridicule if the world does not end tomorrow, but, he said, "I cannot find a mistake in my calculations." He said his figuring was based on Biblical teachings.

Mercury's Rise Increases Fear Of Flood Here

Ice Break-up in River Near; 2 D. C. Boys Die in Crash.

The breakup of ice in the upper Potomac, which may cause disastrous floods at Washington and all along the river, will be brought nearer by the rains and rising temperatures forecast for today, Weather Bureau experts said last night.

Such danger is not imminent, as it was said that at least two or three days of thawing temperatures and rain would be needed to unlock the great sheets of ice and send them smashing downriver on flood waters.

The key which may open the river, Weather Bureau workers said, is a low pressure warm disturbance now over Texas. The effect of this disturbance is expected to be felt here tonight, and if it brings sufficient rain and warmth, may break up the ice.

Faced by the possibility of a general thaw, Maj. Robert G. Guyer, district engineer for the War Department, checked on preparations to summon a volunteer army of 2,000 men should the Potomac overflow its banks and threaten to inundate low-lying sections of the Capital.

Plans already have been made to throw up emergency dykes between the Lincoln Memorial and the Monument Grounds, and on P street southwest. These two points are vulnerable spots should the river go on a rampage.

No Cause for Alarm.

"We do not view the situation as alarming," an official spokesman in the engineer's office said last night.

"However, we are getting ready to meet any eventuality which might follow continued rain and a sudden thaw. Possibility that the thaw may be normal is hoped for by everyone. We can't tell yet."

The rivers and harbors division of the Weather Bureau last night had special observers at work along the upper Potomac. They reported the ice was holding at dusk.

The city had a flood preview in minature last night as ice-clogged catchbasins backed up slush and rainwater in several intersections.

Firemen were called to clear out

Parades Here to Plan Philippines' Legation

A commission to arrange for the construction of a $375,000 legation in this city has been entrusted to Quintin Paredes, the Philippine Commonwealth's first envoy to this country, he revealed yesterday.

The building of the legation is a pet project of President Manuel L. Quezon, Paredes explained. A possible site has already been selected along Massachusetts avenue near the Japanese Embassy and which the envoy intends to inspect at his earliest convenience.

Compromise Leave Bills To Be Pushed

26-Day Vacation Period Is Chief Amendment Given Approval.

Senate Expected to Act Next Week; House Will Follow.

The way was cleared yesterday for early enactment of the Government leave bills but in a modified form after the Senate Civil Service Committee had reported the measures with several amendments, the chief of which would fix the annual vacation period at 26 days, exclusive of Sundays and holidays.

As the amendments were said to be acceptable to Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, no further opposition is anticipated in the Senate. They will be called up on the next unanimous consent calendar, probably early next week.

Represents Gain.

Chairman Ramspeck, of the House Civil Service Committee, could not be reached for comment, but other House sponsors of the leave bills indicate their willingness to accept the compromise agreement rather than permit the bills to die this session. It was said, however, that the Senate measures will be sent to conference as a matter of form.

Another amendment to the House bill reduces the limit allowed for accumulation of vacation and sick leave from 120 to 60 days.

The 26-day compromise represents a slight gain by Government employes over the former proposal of Senator McKellar, i. e., that a 30-day leave be granted including Sundays and holidays. As a month's leave would obviously include four Sundays, the elimination of holidays might give employes longer vacations in certain instances and would not work injustices on those who take their vacations during the Christmas holidays.

Other amendments approved by the committee provide:

The effective date of both bills is changed to July 1, 1936.

Certificates for Illness.

Certificates satisfactory to department heads, but not necessarily signed by physicians, must be furnished by employes who claim sick leave.

Department heads who are authorized to draft regulations to put the 30-day leave act into effect are required to meet in conference so that the administration will be as uniform as possible for all Government workers.

A section which would have allowed employes to add overtime work to accumulated annual leave was stricken out.

The House provision which would have made the acts applicable to any corporation created by act of Congress and controlled or owned by the Federal Government was modified to apply only to corporations owned "wholly" by the Government.

The amendments, it was understood, were not solely the suggestions of Senator McKellar, but were worked out at an executive conference attended by Senators Bulow (Democrat), of South Dakota; Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky; Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia; George (Democrat), of Georgia; Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia; Gibson (Republican), of Vermont; Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota and McKellar.

Hearing Is Adjourned.

Yesterday afternoon Senator McKellar, as chairman of a sub-committee, heard Harry B. Mitchell, chairman, and Lewis G. Fisher, chief of the retirement division of the Civil Service Commission, on the Neely bill providing for optional retirement of Government employes after 30 years' service at 60 years of age.

Because of the lack of adequate figures on the cost of the proposed change in the civil service retirement act, the hearing adjourned after McKellar had asked the Civil Service Commission to submit cost estimates and its views of the legislation within a week.

The present retirement act permits optional retirement at 62 in most cases, with mandatory retirement at 65 for mechanical and manual workers, and 70 for clerical employes. The Neely bill would remove any restriction on extensions of service beyond the optional retirement age.

Hauptmann Weeps at Parley With Liebowitz on 'Truth'

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 13.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann and Samuel S. Leibowitz, New York criminal lawyer, who said he would try to aid him if he would tell the truth, met today and their hour's interview ended with Hauptmann in tears.

Leibowitz, who with Hauptmann's wife, Anna, visited the prisoner in the State prison death house, said the interview was "very satisfactory."

"Hauptmann broke down and cried like a child," he said. "I'm coming to see him again Sunday."

He would say no more. Asked if Hauptmann had confessed the kidnap-killing of the Lindbergh baby or changed his story in any detail, Leibowitz replied, "No comment."

However, Mrs. Hauptmann, who was smiling as she left the prison and stood near Leibowitz when he made his statement, said later "of course" Hauptmann had not confessed. She said her husband had "cried a little," but attributed it to emotion.

After leaving the prison, Leibowitz, Mrs. Hauptmann and Lieut. Robert W. Hicks, Washington criminologist engaged in behalf of the defense, went to a local hotel, where they conferred for a half hour. They left later for New York with Leibowitz refusing to elaborate on his earlier statement.

Before leaving New York for Trenton, Leibowitz announced Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, prominent Washington society woman, interested him in the case.

Leibowitz said he visited Mrs. McLean at her estate, Friendship Heights, Washington, in company

Coast Guard Amphibian, Two Cutters Search Course for Ketch Caroline as Weather Bureau Orders Storm Signals in Area.

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 13.—A Coast Guard amphibian from the Dinner Key air base returned tonight after a six-hour search failed to produce a trace of the missing Ketch Caroline, long overdue in the Miami-to-Nassau yacht race.

Four people were aboard the Caroline, 37-foot double-ender, owned by Harold Bowen, of Grants Mill, R. I. Bowen was the skipper. With him was Mrs. Bowen and either another couple or two more men. The ketch should have arrived at Nassau last night.

Small craft storm warnings, which would affect the Caroline, were ordered aloft around the entire Florida coast late today. The warning showed general stormy conditions about the race area. Skies were overcast.

A six-hour search over the eastern section of the course revealed no sign of Bowen's ketch. A radiogram from Nassau reported barometers falling and rough weather developing on the ocean.

The cutters Pandora and Vigilant, which acted as convoys for the racing fleet, began to criss-cross the course after dark. The Coast Guard air base here announced two planes will be dispatched at daybreak if no trace of the vessel is found by that time.

U. S. Negotiates On Clipper Ship China Airport

Diplomats Seek to Overcome Japan's Objections in Orient.

Negotiations are under way to overcome Japanese objections to the extension of the China Clipper airline from Manila, in the Philippines, to the China mainland, The Post learned yesterday.

Plans for forging the final link in the transpacific air route from the United States to China were originally drawn up for early execution immediately after the historic Clipper flight late in November, but have been held up pending the outcome of these negotiations, it was learned.

Efforts of Pan-American Airway officials to secure landing rights in Southern China have proven fruitless thus far, largely, it was indicated, for fear that the granting of these rights would encourage other powers to seek similar concessions.

Has No International Lines.

In this connection, it was recalled, about a month ago when there was talk of starting an air service between Canton and French Annam, the Japanese objected, stressing that all their demands for establishment of air communications between Tokyo and Shanghai had been turned down by Nanking on the ground that this would establish a precedent and intensify international rivalry in China.

At present there are no international air lines leading directly into China. The British-owned Imperial Airways lands passengers in the British port of Hongkong, while the Chinese National Airways, in which Pan-American owns considerable stock, operates within the country. However, there is no direct commercial route from the outside world to China proper.

Last September the Japanese linked Tokyo with Manchukuo by air and are planning to extend this route soon to Peiping in north

Toscanini Resigns As Orchestra Head

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—The New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society tonight announced that Arturo Toscanini would not return to this country to direct its orchestra after the present season ends.

The announcement climaxed rumors current since last fall that Toscanini, acclaimed the greatest conductor of his time, was preparing to surrender his directorship of the New York orchestra.

"After half a century of continuous conducting," the announcement said, "the maestro feels the necessity for a release from the great responsibility of presiding as music director of a permanent orchestra.

"His last performance here will be the concert which closes the present season on Sunday afternoon, April 26."

'Jeffersonian' Coalition With G. O. P. Scored

Vandenberg Talk Draws Criticism; Roosevelt Files in Illinois.

By the Associated Press.

Scant Republican response, coupled with Democratic criticism, yesterday greeted a proposal by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, for a coalition against President Roosevelt, with a promise of political reward for Democrats if the New Deal is overthrown.

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher, of the Republican National Committee, conceded he had "heard talk" of a coalition Cabinet if the G. O. P. nominee is successful in November, but declined to record himself pro or con.

Roosevelt Files in Illinois.

Outspoken opposition came, however, from Representative Snell, of New York, House minority leader, with Speaker Byrns, two Democratic Senators and others from the majority ranks offering either ridicule of counter-attack.

The discussion made up part of a political day which saw Senator Dickinson, of Iowa, declare himself a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, and brought forth President Roosevelt's signed declaration of candidacy for a second term. Formal petitions entering his name in the Illinois primary were filed at Springfield.

In Washington, Secretary Ickes hit back at former President Hoover's most recent criticism of the New Deal with an assertion that he had never "known a man in public life who was in such a constant state of jitters."

Ickes contended that Hoover had made "such a boggle-de-botch of his own Administration that he was unwilling to admit that anyone else could do better." Hoover, he said, now "sees a boogy man under every bed," adding that when he passes an "open microphone, he yells 'Boo!'"

"He's suffering from boogy-phobia," Ickes concluded.

Brazilian Boat Searches For Missing Air Liner

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—An Air France dispatch boat, seeking trace of the missing air liner Ville de Buenos Aires, tonight sped to a spot about 600 miles off the Brazilian coast, where oil patches were reported on the surface.

The plane, carrying a crew of five and one passenger, has been missing since last Monday. It was en route to Dakar, Senegal, Africa, from Natal. The oil patches were reported by a British ship.

Ruhland Cites Health Needs To House Unit

Head of D. C. Department Pictures Inadequacy of Facilities.

Blanton, Obdurate, Calls Night Session; Mass Meeting Gains.

Moving toward a climax, the following developments in Washington's drive for public health funds tumbled one over another yesterday.

Holding its first night meeting, the House sub-committee on District appropriations headed by Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, heard Health Officer George C. Ruhland describe the existing emergency. Representative J. William Ditter, of Pennsylvania, only Republican member of the sub-committee, and who is known to be sympathetic to the Capital's health needs, was not present. The meeting last night was not scheduled until yesterday afternoon. Ditter left the city Wednesday and planned to return here today.

Earlier in the day, Blanton made public a letter, dated February 12, he wrote to Dr. Sterling Ruffin in which he "thanks" the District Medical Society "for taking this burden off our shoulders." Dr. Ruffin is president of the society, which is sponsoring a mass meeting Sunday to discuss the Capital's hospital, tuberculosis assistance and other health needs.

The Washington Post learned last night that Blanton's letter to Dr. Ruffin was in the form of a reply. When the former handed out copies to the press, he did not mention this fact or make any other comment.

Blanton Refuses to Budge.

In an extended telephone conversation last night, Blanton told The Post that "in spite of all the criticism leveled at me by newspapers and individuals I will not budge one inch in my duty to Washington."

"I have close at heart the city's health, police, traffic, schools and other departments," he said, "regardless of the criticism the papers unjustly give me. Why, I am missing my dinner tonight so I can attend this session to hear Dr. Ruhland."

The Post learned further that immediately following letter to Blanton,

Since your telephone call of yesterday, I have feared that the position of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia in the matter of necessary funds for carrying on an effective public health program for the District has been misunderstood.

"I am therefore writing to ask for a conference between you and a small group of members of the Medical Society for the purpose of making the position of the Medical Society entirely clear. The Medical Society is not critical or antagonistic even remotely, but only wishes to exercise through a mass meeting of citizens the right of petition and to put before the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and Congress the urgent public health needs of this city."

Opposed to Mass Meeting.

(In the telephone call of last Monday referred to by Dr. Ruffin, Blanton made it clear that he was opposed to plans for the mass meeting, which will be held at 3 p. m. Sunday in Central High School auditorium.)

During the course of last night's telephone conversation with Blanton, which was held shortly before the secret sub-committee hearing of Dr. Ruhland was scheduled to begin at 7:30, the Texas Congressman explained why a night meeting was decided upon.

The health hearings would have begun yesterday afternoon, he said, only members of the sub-committee wished to be on the House floor to attend debate of the Army appropriation bill. So the District Commissioners were called by telephone and asked if a night session would be convenient to them. They replied in the affirmative, said Blanton. It was scheduled for 7:30 p. m.

Representative Ditter was not present when the sub-committee voted to return to the Capitol for the night assignment, said Blanton, adding that the Pennsylvania Republican advised him before he left not to permit his absence to interfere with District appropriations hearings. Up to yesterday all of them have been held by day.

"We are working in harmony with Mr. Ditter," said the sub-committee chairman, who in the past has fig-

Bill Would Restrict Service Bands' Music

While the Congressional scrap over the Marine Band's walkout on a recent conference of the Patriotic Women's Conference for National Defense is over, the melody has lingered on and yesterday took the form of a bill drafted by Chairman McSwain of the House Military Affairs Committee.

The bill prohibits the Army, Navy, Marine and Coast Guard bands, or any of their members, from "furnishing music on any occasion or function beyond the scope of the service of such band or member" except by an act of Congress or a special order of the President.

The bill provides that the superior ordering the music would forfeit one day's pay and allowances.

Greater Mortgage Help Slum Clearing, FHA Extension Asked.

Passage Sought At This Session

Wagner Says First Year Cost to Be 'Under 400 Million.'

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt yesterday approved a new long-time Federal housing program, which he expects to be written into law at the present session of Congress.

Principal provisions of the plan are:

1. Encouragement of private construction of houses, particularly those costing $8,000 or less, through an increase in the size of mortgages guaranteed by the Government.

2. Development of slum-clearance projects by local communities with Government subsidies.

3. Extension of the law under which the Federal Housing Administration insures loans for modernizing and repair. This provision of the present act expires April 1.

Legislation covering the new program, which in effect will be a broadening of some of the present Government housing activities, will be introduced by March 1 by Senator Robert Wagner (Democrat), New York.

Outline Agreed On.

The general outline of the plan was agreed upon at a conference at the White House attended by Senator Wagner, Secretary Morgenthau and Peter Grimm, assistant to Morgenthau and real estate and housing expert.

The Government itself, under the new program, is expected to build no houses except possibly a limited number for demonstration purposes.

Senator Wagner revealed that the cost of the program for the first year would be "under $400,000,000." It was pointed out, however, that the figure might be nearer $250,000,000. Wagner said that the plan covers a period of ten years.

"In the conference we went over a large number of proposed plans," Wagner said. "They covered slum clearance, houses for low-income families, encouragement of the construction of small homes, the question of the extension of the modernization and repair program."

Outlines Points.

Wagner then outlined the three principal points in the new program, saying they involved more money for slum clearance and more authority for the activities now being conducted by the Federal Housing Administration.

Asked whether these activities would be co-ordinated under one head, Wagner said, "there will have to be some co-ordination of agencies but what form it will take I can't say."

Grimm indicated later that he did not expect all Government housing activities to be under one head.

The Government itself will build no more houses, Wagner indicated, except possibly in a few instances for demonstration purposes.

The Federal Housing Administration now insures mortgage loans up to 80 per cent on houses appraised at $20,000 or less. The new measure will increase this insurance to 90 per cent, at least as it applies to houses costing $5,000 or less. The loans are amortized over a period of 20 years. There has been some discussion of a plan for insuring loans only on new construction. Loans on houses already built cannot be insured.

Slums Local Projects.

Slum clearance projects, under the new plan, must be initiated by local governments or organizations formed in connection with local governments. A part of the cost will be covered by Federal loans or grants or both. The percentage of loans and grants has not been determined, Wagner said.

Asked whether the slum clearance activities would remain in the Interior Department, Wagner said that "certainly we will make use of the Interior Department's experience."

The plan, as it was thus broadly outlined, would appear to affect only two of the Government's housing set-ups, the housing division of the Interior Department and the Federal Housing Administration.

Besides these two, the Government's principal housing agencies are:

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which has made loans for large-scale housing.

The Home Owners Loan Corporation, which has been engaged in

House Leaders Plan Neutrality Test on Monday

Will Rush Bill to Vote With Amendments Banned; Senate Sets Action.

By Robert C. Albright.

In the face of a drive on both sides of the Capitol to force broad amendments into pending neutrality legislation, House leaders agreed last night to rush the measure to House passage Monday, under a suspension of rules, barring all amendments.

This plan, which will force a "yes" or "no" vote on neutrality law extension, will effectively cut off moves to alter the measure, so far as the House is concerned. Aware they must make their last stand in the Senate to force changes in the law, the Senate's strict neutrality bloc met yesterday and agreed on a dual program of action.

First, when the measure comes up in the Senate next week, they will seek a simple 60-day extension of the present law, on the theory that a "stronger" bill can be worked out in that period.

Plan "Own Risk" Amendment.

This failing, they will try to amend the law to require Americans trading with belligerents to do so "at their own risk," and, if possible, to include such commodities as oil, cotton and copper under a "war material" ban.

Decision to call up the House neutrality bill, amended largely to conform with Senate Foreign Relations Committee changes, under a rules suspension on Monday, was announced last night by Chairman Sam D. McReynolds, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

McReynolds has summoned his committee to meet this morning to report out the new bill, introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Frank L. Kloeb (Democrat), Ohio, with "clarifying" changes.

Like the Senate bill, the House measure extends the expiring neutrality law until May 1, 1937, adding to it a ban on loans and credits to belligerent nations, but exempting American republics warring with foreign powers, from the terms of the act.

McReynolds Explains.

Chairman McReynolds, who was the original proponent of the South American exemption clause, now included in House and Senate bills, authorized the following statement:

"At a meeting of the committee this morning, we had before us the bill introduced by Representative Kloeb, and also a copy of the bill reported by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. We went over both bills and agreed unanimously to introduce an entirely new bill covering the amendments agreed upon, and to report it tomorrow. There is no difference between the

'Manna' From Blimp Scares Ducks From Capital Refuge

Officials of the National Capital Parks are thinking of stringing a wire netting, lettered "Do Not Feed the Ducks," that would be easily visible to airplanes and blimps, across the Federal wild bird sanctuary at Roaches Run.

The lettered netting, is is hoped, would serve as a deterrent to the soft-hearted and equally air-minded duck lovers who tossed 600 pounds of corn to the ducks in the sanctuary late Wednesday from the Goodyear blimp, passing overhead.

Neither the parks department nor the Biological Survey have any objection to private duck lovers undertaking to feed starving birds—that is—as long as the right birds are fed. As it turned out, the ducks in Roaches Run, fed daily by park caretakers, are of a sleek, frying-pan plumpness. It is their cousins, stranded down the ice-bound Potomac, off Fort Hunt and Fort Belvoir, who are in need.

What particularly aroused the ire of C. Marshall Finnan, director of the Capital parks, was not that the sanctuary ducks had been given an extra meal, but that the "manna from heaven" scared all but a few of the birds away.

At feeding time yesterday morning only a score or more birds showed up instead of the thousands that usually do. Only the permanent residents of the sanctuary—and not all of these—were brave enough to return after the frightening experience of blimp feeding.

To prove that their "heart was in the right place" officials of the Goodyear blimp offered to feed the right ducks today. The Biological Survey will supply the corn which the blimp will transport down the Potomac to the birds, ice-stranded and too weak or too timid to fly to shore.

New Deal Held 'StudiedAttack' OnConstitution

Supreme Court Defended by Ex-Governor Miller in Radio Talk.

Every New Deal measure discloses the most painstaking study of the Constitution in order to find pretexts to violate it, Nathan L. Miller, former Governor of New York, said in a radio talk last night.

"By keeping within its judicial power," Miller said, "the Supreme Court, unlike the legislative and executive branches of the Government, has retained the public confidence, and public opinion does not tolerate the flouting of its decisions, despite the efforts of the unworthy and the misguided to discredit them."

"They all contain false declarations of purpose, to invoke the presumption, in which the courts always indulge, in favor of legislation.

"Those measures would have brought production, distribution and credit, as well as transportation and communication, in short, the daily lives and activities of the people, so completely under the control of Federal bureaucracies that the transition to the abolition of the right of private property would have been almost imperceptible."

Lacked Validity.

Miller said that as long as it stood, the New Deal "was indeed a 'rounded whole.'"

"No part was missing," he said. "All the parts matched. It merely lacked validity."

"An occasional error in resolving doubts, or an occasional stretch of authority, might be overlooked," Miller said. "But an entire program, a completely 'rounded whole,' which fundamental law, compels the conclusion that it was planned to overthrow that law.

"In the stress of an emergency it is impossible, it is said, thoroughly to consider all measures, a very good reason why radical changes of a permanent nature should not be attempted at such a time.

"The truth is that little respect was shown for the Constitution because at the moment it seemed safe to disregard it.

Paramount Measures.

"But the measures composing the 'rounded whole' were not temporary measures to bridge an emergency. They were permanent measures designed to effect organic changes. The people have become aware of that. They have suddenly awakened to the fact that their trust has been abused. That is why the prudent no longer speak flippantly of the Constitution. That is why none but the Wallace type venture open attacks on the Supreme Court. That is why those who have been caught in the attempt to change the people's Constitution by stealth, do not dare to propose constitutional amendments and create the issue in the open.

"It is well known that the sponsors of the New Deal legislation did not think it could survive established constitutional tests. Their plan, openly avowed, was to get the country so thoroughly enmeshed that expediency might save it."

Referring to the statement of Secretary Wallace that the Supreme Court has approved a "legalized steal" in connection with return of AAA processing taxes, Miller said:

"The truth is he himself was trying to commit a trespass. He and his kind think it is all right to steal if they do the stealing. Private rights mean nothing to them."

Detective Arrests 2 Theft Suspects

Two colored men, who police said are responsible for thefts of nearly $3,000 worth of property from parked automobiles during the last six months, were arrested yesterday by Detective Sergt. Hugh "Steve" Brodie.

Brodie said he saw the two men peering into parked cars near Thirteenth and H street northwest. He followed them, he said, and at Seventh and H streets northwest, one of the men took a handbag from a car. They whistled for a taxi that had been cruising in the vicinity and started off.

The detective jumped to the running board of the car. His gun flew from his overcoat pocket just as he leaped on the two men in the rear of the cab. Brodie subdued two of the men, while another escaped.

At police headquarters the men said they were Nathaniel Fletcher, 30, of 1310 Sixth street northwest, and Edwin B. Washington, 27, of 20 Q street northwest. They were booked for investigation. Fletcher has been arrested eight times before for robbery, housebreakings and automobile thefts.

Housing Program Most Futile Aspect of New Deal; Construction Lags in Recovery Progress.

By Franklyn Waltman

PERHAPS no aspect of the New Deal has been more disappointing—more futile, it might be said, in achieving positive results—than the housing program. This does not refer to the effort to save homes from mortgage foreclosure. But it is true of the Government's efforts to build low-cost housing through slum-clearance and rehabilitation schemes as well as its efforts to encourage private initiative in home building.

The failure of this part of the New Deal is obvious from a glance at any of the standard statistics on industrial activity. The construction and allied industries remain in a state of acute depression, despite the sharp rise in industrial activity generally and despite the increase in residential building experienced in the last year.

During most of last year one-half of the members of building trades unions were unemployed. Employment in the brick, tile and terra cotta industry in December was but 35.8 per cent of the 1923-25 average—and the high peak for the year was in December. Employment in millwork and sawmills was but 47.6 and 35.8 per cent of the 1923-25 average The monthly average of construction contracts of all kinds awarded last year, according to the Federal Reserve Board, was but 37 per cent of the 1923-25 average, compared with 117 per cent in 1929.

"Exceptional as was the improvement in residential construction last year," asserts the February Federal Home Loan Bank Review, "it failed as did total construction, to keep pace with industrial activity, judging from the preliminary unadjusted indexes of the Federal Reserve System for December. While residential construction was 78 per cent and total construction was 47 per cent below the 1923-25 base period, general industrial activity was only 6 per cent under the same norm."

This should be sufficient to demonstrate why thoughtful men in the Administration and on Capitol Hill are sorely distressed over the problem of resuscitating the construction and allied industries. Still others are concerned over the failure of the Administration to take advantage of what they regard as an opportunity to supply many thousands of persons now living in slums with decent homes.

The problem has been considered and discussed to a greater extent probably than any other. Half-a-dozen New Deal agencies have attacked it. Almost every week a new housing plan is proposed. The result has been to add confusion to inactivity. Capitol Hill has been thrown into a fog and the public generally does not have the least understanding of what it is all about.

President Roosevelt yesterday undertook to draw together all the loose ends and plans and to strike a compromise among them. The inference in the plan agreed on is that the Federal Government will get out of the business of trying to build cheap houses, once the existing programs are completed. Slum clearance is to be promoted through a loan-and-grant system to municipalities. Private initiative is to be promoted by raising the amount of mortgages on low-cost houses which the FHA will insure from 80 to 90 per cent.

Only a superficial knowledge of what has happened in the real estate field in recent years is necessary to question whether the Federal Government is not beginning to skate on very thin ice in raising its insurance to cover loans of 90 per cent of the appraised value of a home.

Indeed, ably trained, fully qualified and tight-lipped appraisers of real estate working for private lending companies have been known to disagree by a margin of more than 10 per cent—sometimes of 20 and 30 per cent—as to the value of a given home. The FHA has developed a staff of competent appraisers, but they are apt honestly to disagree as to value—and on a 10 per cent loan margin there is little room for overvaluation, especially on 20-year loans, without serious risk to the Government agency.

Loans are made on small homes in England up to 90 per cent of appraised value, but, according to experts in the mortgage field here, only when the borrower pledges collateral other than the property, such as stocks or bonds, life insurance policies or the like. Before that 90 per cent figure is adopted Congress should consult the best expert opinion it can find.

Increasing the amount which can be borrowed on a house may stimulate home building. But after all, real recovery in the housing field will come chiefly as a result of the operation of the forces of supply and demand, set in motion by price factors.

High costs have been the chief deterrent to home building—the high cost of labor, materials and financing. The Government has attacked only the last. The New Deal is in large part responsible, through the NRA, for the maintenance of the high cost of labor and materials.

Virtually the only card played by the Administration in the way of encouraging private initiative in home building has been a reduction in the cost of financing, the theory apparently being that if financing were made cheap enough or plentiful enough people would borrow to build homes.

But, as the results have demonstrated, it is fallacious to believe that people will go into debt for things when they do not think it is a good proposition economically. The situation simply was that as long as members of a family could rent a house or apartment as cheaply as they could own a home, they preferred to rent. Either the cost of building had to come down or rents had to go up to encourage home building.

The latter commenced to happen last year. In January, 1934, the National Industrial Conference Board's index of housing rentals stood at 60.6 per cent of the 1923-25 base level. In December, 1934, it had advanced to 64.6 per cent. In December, 1935, it had reached 70.9 per cent. This gradual rise made it wise for many thousands of families to buy homes. Further rental increases will encourage many thousands more to buy homes. As they begin to absorb the existing houses, then the country will be ready for the construction of more houses.

Of course, the availability of financing at reasonable cost and on sound terms can do much to hasten the movement. But it is clear that all the New Deal agencies and their thousands of field agents could not overcome what the psychologists would term "consumer resistance" to an uneconomic program.

Policeman's Wife Ill, Shoots Self

Mrs. Margaret Rehbein, 40, wife of Policeman Oscar Rehbein, of the Ninth Precinct, was in critical condition in Gallinger Hospital yesterday from a self-inflicted bullet wound in her abdomen.

Mrs. Rehbein was found unconscious on the second floor of her home, 109 Nineteenth street southeast, by her husband, who heard the report of a gun while he was eating breakfast with his 12-year-old son, Richard. Rehbein's .38 caliber police revolver was found by his wife's side.

Rehbein ran from the house for aid when he discovered his wife. James B. Murphy, a neighbor, helped Rehbein take his wife to the hospital directly across the street from their home.

On the operating table, Mrs. Rehbein told a Fifth Precinct policeman:

"I want to end it all; I was only in the way."

Rehbein told his fellow officers his wife had been despondent over ill health for a long time. He said he had kept his revolver hidden for the past month, but his wife had been in good spirits recently and he left the gun in its holster in a closet.

R. H. Jackson Slated As Cummings' Aid

By the Associated Press.

Robert H. Jackson, of Jamestown, N. Y., general counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, was reported last night to be the choice of Attorney General Cummings for the position of Assistant Attorney General.

Cummings called on Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, and later the Senator said: "Mr. Cummings asked for my indorsement of Mr. Jackson as Assistant Attorney General. I gave it."

In his present post Jackson represented the Government in the income tax case brought against Andrew W. Mellon.

The resignation of Frank J. Wideman, of Florida, as Assistant Attorney General was announced yesterday.

Walsh Predicts No New Levies During Session

Billion Needed, King Says, as Tax Plan Delay Causes Rumors.

Administration delay in formulating a new tax program yesterday started new speculation at the Capitol on the nature and scope of the projected levies, leading to one forecast that there will be no new taxes enacted this session, and another that at least $1,000,000,000 in revenues are needed.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, insisted a program will be put forward to finance at least that portion of the increased burden on the Treasury made necessary by the new farm program, and that "the whole situation will be cleared up within the next three days."

But Doughton admitted he had received no further word from the Treasury or the White House since he sat in on a preliminary Administration tax conference more than a week ago. Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, said no authoritative word had come to him.

Making clear that he was giving only his personal opinion, Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said he believed the outlook pointed instead to taxes next session striking at the lower incomes, and coupled with sharp curtailment of public spending.

"Personally, I do not look for any tax bill to be passed at this session of Congress," said the Massachusetts Senator, who is a member of the Senate Finance Committee.

Doughton said he would be "pleased indeed" if it should be found that increased revenues and savings effected in recent retrenchment, should make a new tax bill unnecessary, but declared that "if they have changed their minds about having a tax bill, they have told me nothing about it."

The North Carolinian is inclined to believe the Administration plans to go through with its tax recommendations, and may let his committee know just how far it desires to go this week.

As speculation on the tax outlook spread through the Capitol, Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, another member of the Senate Finance Committee, declared the Administration "can't do anything else but propose new taxes."

"I am probably in the minority," King said, "but I believe we should raise at least $1,000,000,000 in new revenue to meet the increased drain on the Treasury. I hate to suggest it, but time business appears to be getting on its feet, but with increasing expenditures, the only sound way to meet them is a new revenue measure—not through issuance of bonds."

Following the recent White House tax conference, Doughton said he looked for a "moderate bill," in the neighborhood of $500,000,000—approximating the cost of the new farm program. One suggestion is that the Administration is waiting for passage of its farm bill before it formally submits its new tax program, fearing definitely to link the two in the light of the Supreme Court's AAA ruling. A vote on the farm bill may be reached in the Senate today.

One thing was apparent—that the President and his fiscal advisers thus far have reached no definite conclusions on what they will recommend in the way of new levies. Congressional leaders, who have determined to initiate no new tax program of their own unless the President directs them to do so by letter or message, are in no hurry for him to send such instructions. If he followed their advice, he would wait until revenue returns are in for the first quarter, and the full results of his recently inaugurated retrenchment drive are apparent. If he waited that long, some hinted, he may propose only a very moderate tax program, if any at all."

Senator Walsh, in a statement discussing the entire Congressional outlook, said his personal belief is there will be none enacted, but added:

"I do look forward for a bill increasing taxes to be passed at the next session of Congress and also at the same time there will be a big battle over the question of cutting the Government expenses. Both these questions will have to be grappled with by the officials of the Federal Government who will be elected in November."

Walsh said regardless of what is done at the present session, it is clear to him that new taxes "will hit the persons with small incomes in 1937 or shortly thereafter."

"One thing is certain, that the spending program of the Government will mean increased taxes or inflation in 1937, if not before," he added. "If we are to have increased taxes they will have to be obtained through lower income tax exemptions and higher normal and surtax rates; also new inheritance taxes, also possibly a general manufacturers' sales tax."

This Senator declared he did not look for any drastic curtailment of spending in the present year, but such a program might be instituted shortly after elections.

"It has not been the practice through the history of depressions to have economy inaugurated in an election year," he said.

The Massachusetts member declared President Roosevelt's present opposition to Congressional moves for inflation is due to lack of success in "experiments which he has made with currency manipulation."

"The experiment in gold buying in the expectation that prices would rise automatically as a result and the country would emerge from the depression, has not produced promised results. The next move was to do something for silver. As a result, quantities of silver bullion were purchased. The theory was that the purchase of silver at rising prices would put dollars into the pockets of 400,000,000 Chinese who would then be in a position to buy American goods.

"In practice silver buying just about wrecked Chinese finance and caused purchase of American goods to fall sharply in China. This silver buying was proven to be unsuccessful. These experiences of President Roosevelt, I believe, has prompted him to combat moves in Congress to try other experiments with spending and currency."

Discussing the need for new revenue brought about by bonus passage, Walsh said "the President himself has observed that actually the bonus payment added only about $100,000,000 to the Treasury burden as a result of payment now to the veterans instead of in 1945."

"The Administration," he added, "thereby suggests a relative minor adjustment of taxes should provide that revenue."

Walsh predicted that the Administration's farm bill will be approved "but considerably modified."

"In my opinion," he said, "it will be unsatisfactory to the farming interests and will be as much objected to as the original AAA."

Small Town Life Dull; Gould Heiress Divorced

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 13 (AP).—Pretty Anne Gould Meador, granddaughter of Jay Gould, the railroad builder, found life here as a bank clerk's wife too dull after the social swirl of New York, Frank Meador said today, in obtaining a divorce.

Meador, an investment clerk in the Groos National Bank, brought charges of desertion and harsh treatment against the young heiress with whom he eloped to Harrison, N. Y., on Christmas night, 1934, after a whirlwind courtship.

He alleged his young bride left their modest San Antonio home within a few months when called East by the death of her father—and did not return.

Direct contact with the kidnapers has not yet been established, the advices from Mukden stated, with the rough terrain impending rescue efforts.

AAA Substitute Vote in Senate Awaited Today

Debate Will Be Restricted on Dozen Amendments Up for Decision.

By the Associated Press.

Senate Administration forces developed strategy yesterday designed to turn back virtually all amendments offered to the soil conservation-subsidy bill.

Although some minor changes are possible, it was learned a general understanding had been reached among Democrats to stick by the Agriculture Committee without substantial modification.

With more than a dozen substitutes and supplements awaiting decision—nearly all controversial—an agreement sharply restricting debate will go into effect today in a drive which Democratic chiefs hope will lead to a final vote by nightfall.

"If we do not vote tomorrow, we will have a session Saturday," said Senator Robinson, majority floor leader.

Export Clause Doubtful.

One amendment urged yesterday was that of Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, to revive the export debenture plan. This was passed twice by the Senate in the Hoover Administration, but rejected by the House. Its adoption was regarded as doubtful.

"If you want to insure the farmer getting a better price," said Connally, "vote for this amendment. But if you just want to give him a little star dust for political purposes, don't vote for this amendment."

The AAA replacement measure now before the Senate was introduced by Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, as a substitute for one by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama. Fundamentally alike, under the substitute the permanent plan for Federal grants to States for soil conservation could become operative upon enactment of State legislation. For two years, Federal subsidies could be paid directly to farmers for "economic use of land."

Connally's amendment, which has some bi-partisan support, would authorize Treasury bounties on farm exports equal to half the tariff on imports of the commodity—a plan the Texan described as a "reversal" of the industrial tariff.

The amendment proposes specific bounties of 7½ cents a bushel on corn, 21 cents a bushel on wheat, 4 cents a pound on cotton, 2 cents a pound on tobacco, and ½ cent a pound on rice.

Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, said he approved the idea, but feared foreign countries would retaliate with high tariffs to offset the domestic bounties.

Investor Nation Is Goal of SEC, Landis Holds

Commission Would Eliminate Speculation, He Tells Bond Club.

The goal of the Securities and Exchange Commission is "a nation of investors" rather than one of "speculators," Chairman James M. Landis of the commission yesterday told the Bond Club of Washington at a luncheon meeting.

Discussing the commission's activities toward regulation of over-the-counter securities sales, he said that broadening of the base of data on corporate affairs will work toward the commission's goal. The general attitude that a security exchange or an individual company should decide where stocks and bonds are to be traded was cast aside by Mr. Landis, who declared that the SEC should be the final judge of whether an issue is to be placed on a security exchange, in the over-the-counter market, or both. An exchange or issuer of securities might be "prejudiced," he said, and the decision as to which market offers the more efficient center of trading of an issue should be left to the commission whose interest is "the public."

Explaining the commission's efforts to obtain from Congress more detailed power over the over-the-counter trading, he told the Washington brokers that the SEC must obtain from 3,500 companies whose securities are traded over-the-counter, financial information comparable to that obtained from similar companies on exchanges. Investor information, he said, "should be gotten whether securities are traded off or on an exchange." He described the difficulty of over-the-counter regulation, but declared "we can do it."

The commission chairman pictured a country of speculators, with the brokerage fraternity in the role of "croupier," and contrasted with it a country of investors, where corporate facts give financial advisers a solid basis for judging values, enabling the investor to avoid buying on guesses.

Approval of the commission's stand was given by the club.

Meanwhile, the SEC recalled the draft of an amending act, sent to the Senate Banking and Currency Commitee, for a change in the SEC act to enable unlisted departments of 16 exchanges to continue after June 1. A new draft was sent to the committee, with changes in construction. The measure would pave the way for increased over-the-counter regulation.

Dust Storm Hides Sun in Four States

Amarillo, Tex., Feb. 13 (AP).—The first big dust storm of 1936 blotted out the sun in sections of four States late today.

The clouds billowed over southeastern Colorado, southwestern Kansas, the Texas Panhandle and a wide area of Oklahoma—the same "dust bowl" area visited by "black blizzards" last year.

Oddly enough, the storm rolled over central and southwestern Oklahoma before it swooped down tonight on the northwestern Panhandle, the area most frequently affected. Its appearance at Boise City, Okla., in the Panhandle, was accompanied by a temperature drop from 46 to 25 degrees in an hour.

Dust mixed with snow blew over the Liberal, Kans., area, the second silt storm there in three days.

Ratio of Silver To Gold Stocks Reaches 21%

Chinese Purchases Main Factor in Gain of Balance, Says Morgenthau.

The ratio of silver stocks to gold has increased from less than 12 per cent to more than 21 per cent since the silver purchase act became operative in June, 1934, it was learned yesterday at the Treasury.

At the same time, it was revealed by Secretary Morgenthau, that a contributing factor in the increase had been purchase of silver from China and an exchange of gold as a portion of the purchase price.

The Secretary revealed that the United States had purchased from China last November, 50,000,000 ounces of silver at 65 cents an ounce, a total of $32,500,000. Recently, it was announced that $10,000,000 in gold had been "earmarked" by this country for China.

Gold Requested by China.

Yesterday Mr. Morgenthau disclosed that the Chinese government had asked the Treasury instead of keeping the silver purchase money in dollar balances in New York, to sell China $10,000,000 worth of gold, still leaving a balance in the New York bank.

"They can have the rest of the money in gold if they want it," Morgenthau said.

He expressed "great admiration" for the management by China of its stabilization fund and currency.

He also denied that this country was paying Mexico a premium for its silver. "Mexico gets the New York price," he said.

Blocks Ratio Discussion.

The Treasury Secretary declined to discuss the increase in the ratio of silver stocks, on the basis of monetary value, to that of gold. The objective of the silver purchase act is to increase silver stocks until they total one-third of the gold stocks.

The figures obtained yesterday indicate the Treasury has about reached the half-way mark in the program. The value of gold stocks was given at $10,154,460,467, with the value of monetary silver stocks at about $2,152,638,000. The silver totals about 1,670,000,000 ounces, with less than 1,000,000,000 ounces yet to be obtained, providing gold stocks remain at about the present figures.

The steady inflow of gold, which has handicapped the silver-buying program, has turned into an outflow in the last few days.

Warrant in Sterilizing Case Reaches New York

Mrs. Hewitt's attorneys have said she is in New York, but have not made known her exact whereabouts.

New U. S. Gun Will Outshoot Famous French 75 of War Days

Piece Can Hit Bull's Eye at 15,000 Yards, Gain of 1,500, Tschappat Says; Cost Is $5,000 Greater Than Ones in Use.

By the Associated Press.

Information on the development of a new field artillery gun that outshoots the famous French 75's of World War days yesterday was in the hands of the House Appropriations Committee.

Maj. Gen. W. H. Tschappat, chief of Army ordnance, gave his data to the committee handling the huge peace-time appropriation for national defense.

The new gun, Tschappat disclosed, hits the bull's-eye at 15,000 yards, an increase of 1,500 yards over the French guns used by American artillery in the World War and since retained as standard artillery equipment.

Tschappat added, however, that the new guns cost approximately $5,000 more each than the old guns. For the present, the Army plans to concentrate on modernizing field guns now on hand, although the new guns may be produced to meet any emergency or to replace guns now in commission when they become obsolete.

Congress has been asked for an appropriation of $632,000 to increase the speed, range, and ability of guns to shift from target to target, at a cost of $11,300 per gun.

Modernization is accomplished, Tschappat explained, by retaining the gun and recuperator, and constructing new undercarriages to replace the wooden-wheeled, steel-tired horse-drawn carriage used in France.

"The new mount," Tschappat said, "is a split-trailer with rubber tires which permits travel at high speed and enables greater traverse and elevation."

Funds are now sought to equip all 75's with a new carriage and sighting apparatus. The carriage will permit the gun to be fired up to elevations of 45 degrees instead of 19 degrees obtainable with the French carriage, which will increase the gun's range from 5 miles to 7½ miles.

The new carriage also permits a change in direction of the gun through 85 degrees without moving the carriage, enabling it to sweep along 11 miles of the enemy's front, as compared with a distance of less than 1 mile for the French carriage.

The new sighting equipment includes a panoramic telescope, a quadrant for fire at fixed targets, and a newly developed telescope and mount which, under test, has been demonstrated to be highly effective on rapidly moving targets such as tanks, scout cars and armored cars.

Officials Seize Coiners' Plates At San Quentin

Spurious Bills Also Found; 3 Now Under Arrest in Prison Ring.

By the Associated Press.

San Quentin, Calif., Feb. 13.—Plates from which counterfeit $10 bills were manufactured by inmates of San Quentin were discovered today hidden in the ceiling of the prison's photographic room.

Secret Service agents also found a bundle of the spurious notes in the cache, for which authorities had been searching since arrest of Dan Wilson, paroled convict, early this week.

Discovery of the hiding place came after men arrested in connection with the counterfeiting asserted the money was made in the prison engraving shop.

Wilson refused to tell how the spurious money was taken out of the prison or how it was made. He pleaded guilty and was placed under $5,000 bail.

Two other alleged members of the ring, Thomas Bell and Clifford Parr, were held under $5,000 bail. Their hearings were scheduled for February 19.

The cache was found after prison officers searched the prison from end to end, going through cells and rooms in which the prisoners worked or were permitted to enter.

Agents were despatched to Monterey County to question Paul Talbott, of Los Angeles, a San Quentin road camp worker, concerning the counterfeiting operations. Talbott formerly was in charge of engraving for prison publications, and he supervised Parr's and Bell's work.

Dress Workers' Strike Averted; Trade RiseSeen

Settlement of Wage Rates for 105,000 Garment Makers Is Effected.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—A spurt in the New York garment market, with the arrival of hundreds of buyers from all parts of the country within a week, was predicted today by a manufacturer as a strike of 105,000 garment workers was averted.

Officials of the International Ladies Garment Workers and representatives of the big manufacturers' groups were agreed, after an all-night conference that climaxed several weeks' negotiations, that disputes over wage rates and jobbers' functions were settled.

Morris Kolchin, director of the Affiliated Dress Manufacturers, Inc., one of the biggest groups, said the agreement was practically in contractual form, the manufacturers bowing to the union's demands. The strike was voted at Cleveland early in January and ratified last week by a mass meeting of garment workers here. Mayor F. H. LaGuardia intervened as a mediator and gained successive delays in the strike, which would have tied up most of the industry.

Kolchin revealed agreement on the union's demand for direct settlement of wage rates between jobbers and workers, heretofore adjusted by contractors. The date for its effectiveness still is to be settled.

Kolchin said "there will be no general increase in the price of dresses to the public." He predicted a spurt in buying.

The renewed threat of a strike of 20,000 building employes in 1,200 mid-town skyscrapers was voiced by James J. Bambrick, union leader, over the asserted breakdown of oral agreements on hours and wages. Late today Bambrick appealed to Mayor LaGuardia to reenter the controversy as a mediator.

Threats of a strike of 11,000 busboys, maids and other hotel workers still simmered, with Chris Houlihan, president of the union organization, issuing another "48-hour dead line" to 210 hotels. Houlihan said affiliated unions of cooks, chefs and waiters would join in sympathy with demands for higher wages and a shorter work week.

American Oil Ban On Italy Is Hinted

Geneva, Feb. 13 (AP).—A report was current in diplomatic circles tonight that certain European nations have tried to induce Latin-American oil-producing countries to cease oil shipments to the United States.

The object of the inducment, the report said, was to make difficult any shipments of oil to Italy from the United States.

Venezuelan and Mexican delegates said they had no knowledge of the report.

Imposition of an oil embargo by the League of Nations appeared unlikely in view of advices from Washington that Congressional legislation authorizing United States participation in such a war penalty seemed improbable.

The report of the experts' committee reviewing the possible effectiveness of an additional sanction against the warring Fascist nation had previously hinged largely on the American attitude toward confining oil exports to the normal quantity.

Earthquakes Rock 4 Montana Cities

Helena, Mont., Feb. 13 (AP).—Earthquakes struck terror in several Montana cities tonight as an added hardship to the State's longest cold wave and heaviest snowfall in years.

Butte, Missoula and Livingston felt light tremors. It is nearly 250 miles from Livingston to Missoula.

No damage was reported.

Pedestrians jumped from the sidewalks in Helena as large quantities of loosened snow toppled from copings of buildings.

A blizzard marooned Ekalaska's 600 inhabitants in extreme southeastern Montana. Only two days' food supplies were on hand. The town called upon Gov. Elmer Holt for assistance.

Eight to ten-foot snowdrifts blocked roads.

Mother on Trial For Kidnaping; Sons for Killing

2 Boys Accused of Slaying Father of Baby Woman Allegedly Stole.

By the Associated Press.

Moncton, N. B., Feb. 13.—A woman charged with first passing off a doll as her baby and then stealing a real infant in order to place "two male friends under moral obligation," was committed today to trial on a charge of kidnaping.

At the same session of the criminal assize court her two sons will also be tried on a charge of murdering the father of the baby allegedly kidnaped.

It will be New Brunswick's first kidnaping trial and one of the strangest cases in Canada's legal annals. The preliminary hearing was held today.

The crown alleges that Mrs. May Bannister, who faces the kidnap trial, "just had to procure a baby somewhere" because she had told two men friends she was expectant.

She "warned the men early in December," the crown asserted, and then appeared on the streets with what witnesses testified appeared to be a "bundled up baby." In reality, said the prosecution, it was a life-size doll.

Then, as outlined by the crown, because of her "necessity" of obtaining a baby, her two sons went to the shack of Philip Lake, a bush squatter. The night of January 5, Lake was shot and was cremated when the cabin burned down. His common-law wife, Mrs. Marshall Ring, and their elder child froze to death in the snow outside.

Frances, 15-year-old daughter of Mrs. Bannister, told the court she and her two brothers carried away the Lake baby the night Lake was killed, but refused to say why.

Defense Counsel Murray Lambert said at the present he would call no witnesses in an effort to discount evidence that Mrs. Bannister harbored the Lake baby in her ramshackle home.

During the preliminary hearing little Mrs. Bannister was sullen and once threatened to "throw something."

"There was no evidence to show she had a baby between the time she warned the men early last December and January 5, when the Lake tragedy occurred," the prosecutor asserted.

He said authorities had found both the Lake baby and a large doll in the Bannister home. The doll, he added, has been split open to remove the automatic "mama cry."

Aid Seeks Ransom To Free Employer

Guadalajara, Mexico., Feb. 13 (AP). Paul W. Avery, American mining engineer kidnaped with Samuel C. Faneuf and released to negotiate payment of ransom, went to Etzatlan today en route to contact his employer's kidnapers.

Avery was expected to pay off the kidnap band and effect Faneuf's release late today or tomorrow.

George H. Winter, United States Consul, said he had been informed Federal troops skirmished with the kidnapers several days ago, but he had not heard the outcome.

The consul added he believed "things were working out smoothly" and there would probably be no further news until Faneuf was released.

Clipper Flies Again With Pacific Mail

Alameda, Calif., Feb. 13 (AP).—The China Clipper seaplane took off for Honolulu late today in resumption of air mail and express service on the 8,000-mile route to Manila.

The four-motored flying boat lifted from San Francisco Bay at 7:25 p. m. Eastern standard time.

Capt. Edwin Musick was at the controls. Trans-Pacific service was interrupted during the holiday season while the China and Philippine clippers underwent reconditioning.

Besides the crew of seven, the plane carried two passengers, Lewis McCarty, design engineer of the Baltimore factory which built the plane, and Raymond B. Quick, of Washington, D. C., Department of Commerce engineering inspector.

Filipinos Favor Japan's Textiles Over U.S. Goods

Manila, Feb. 13 (AP).—A bureau of customs report disclosed today that Japanese textiles imported into the Philippine Islands in December, 1935, amounted to approximately three times the quantity of this commodity from the United States.

The total from the United States was 2,691,641 square meters, compared with 7,322,801 from Japan.

Total trade from the United States during the month was more than $7,000,000 the report stated.

Flood Rise Feared Here

Cellar Flooded.

The cellar of a house at 615 Navy place southeast was flooded. Fire apparatus pumped the water out. The apparatus was also called into action at Twelfth and Fourteenth streets where they cross G street, at Twentieth and Twenty-first street, at K and L streets, and several other intersections.

Yesterday's monotonous cold rain, which froze and festooned telephone wire and trees, and glazed windshields, caused considerable damage throughout the city. Several reports were received of leaking roofs and cellar walls.

In many cases firemen sprayed water on leaking roofs to remove the snow, slush and ice.

A Grim Night.

It was a grim and foreboding night. Those few persons who ventured downtown were seen huddled in doorways trying to attract taximen's attention.

Men in top hats and formal dress and women in evening gowns, looked disconsolately out of hotel entrances, faced with a dreary and wet trip home.

Glazing streets and highways, already hazardous with a treacherous film of ice, combined snow, sleet and rain covered Washington and much of the Eastern seaboard, bringing death and injuries to motorists who braved some of the greatest traffic difficulties winter ever has devised.

Two Washington youths were killed instantly near Richmond, Va., when their automobile was demolished as it collided head-on with a heavy truck on the slippery highway.

They were Edward B. Halfpap, 25, and Cecil H. Lutz, 19, both of 1114 Eleventh street northwest. A third Washingtonian, Vincent Demma, 19, of 1318 Fourteenth street northwest, was injured.

Traffic Is Crippled.

The crash occurred in the sleet at Brook Run, 2 miles this side of the Virginia capital. The truck, police said, skidded after it had passed another truck, and careened into the car which Halfpap was driving. The two young men died instantly in the debris, and Demma was rushed to a Richmond hospital, where physicians said he suffered a sprained ankle and bruises.

Killian G. Thornburg, driver of the truck, was uninjured. He was held on a charge of involuntary manslaughter.

A fourth victim from North Carolina, a passenger in the automobile, suffered a fractured leg and facial injuries.

Washington's traffic throughout the day was crippled. Drivers were cautious, and moved slowly. As taxis crawled between street cars and occasional snow plows, clearing a route for trams, no serious accidents were reported.

Deaths May Pass 200.

London, Feb. 13, (AP).—Deaths from blizzards, gales and cold may exceed 200 in Europe and the Near East, it was feared tonight, after milder conditions enabled a partial restoration of transportation and communication systems.

The Balkans were hard hit. Reports to the Bulgarian ministry of the interior said at least 100 persons lost their lives in a blizzard, many of them travelers caught between villages.

King Boris, who is visiting Germany, telephoned orders that relief work be speeded.

Havana, Feb. 13 (AP).—At least a dozen persons were injured, some of them seriously, when a tornado swept through the village of Alquizar, Havana Province, today.

Magician Carter Dies in Bombay; To Try Return

Made Pact Long Ago With Houdini to Attempt to Return to Life.

By the United Press.

San Francisco, Feb. 13.—Carter the Great, the magician who entertained millions by his feats of legerdermain, is going to give the spiritualists another chance to prove that people return to life after death.

Carter died to day in Bombay, India, of a heart attack. He was 61, and had been ill since mid-January.

Long ago, Carter made a secret pact with the late Harry Houdini, the great escape artist, that he would join Houdini in return to earth after death if such a feat were possible.

Houdini's return has been awaited for years—his widow in Los Angeles even prepared a special "reception" for him—but he never appeared.

Carter, like Houdini, who was one of his closest friends, placed no faith in supernatural manifestations, and decried "table knockings," seances and other spiritualistic phenomena. Yet, again like Houdini, Carter agreed to give the life-after-death theory every possible chance to operate.

His wife, Corinne, who spent 30 years touring the world with him, did not know the details of the pact, she said tonight, but was aware of its existence.

Carter, the original "boy magician," was one of the few of the company of Thurston, Hermann the Great, Keller, Blackstone, Niccolo and Golden who made a fortune from his work of fooling all the people all of the time. His wife served as manager of their property, conserving their assets until they acquired a large apartment house here, then a striking brick mansion in an exclusive Sea Cliff overlooking the Golden Gate.

Three years ago, he suffered the first heart attack, she recounted tonight. He refused to "coddle" himself.

"If I stay around here and rest, I" die," he said.

He continued to stage his magic shows, and started his eighth and last tour 28 months ago. His son, Lawrence, 30, worked with him.

Carter perfected the type of magician's show in which elaborate staging was required. He carried 30 tons of baggage on the current trip.

Some of his most famous illusions were "Levitation," in which a girl apparently rose through the air; "Sawing a Woman in Half," "The Lion's Bride," "The Phantom Bride," and "Three Card Monte."

Friend of Bryan Found Dead Here

William C. Parriott, former justice of the Supreme Court of Nebraska and friend of the late William Jennings Bryan, was found dead in his room at the Portland Hotel yesterday by a porter. He managed Bryan's Presidential campaign in 1896.

The former judge had been working at the Federal Housing Administration as assistant to the chief of reports and records section of the field division. His secretary became alarmed when the judge did not arrive for work yesterday and telephoned the hotel.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, coroner, issued a certificate of death from heart disease. Mrs. Parriott, who is in Lincoln, Nebr., was notified.

Rain Fails to Stop Syrian Riots, One Dies

Beirut, Syria, Feb. 13 (AP).—Nationalists, undaunted by the worst rainstorms in 50 years, continued rioting today at Aleppo, and one student was killed after demonstrators stoned street cars. Another was wounded.

Women of leading families of Damascus, along with merchants, asked Mohammed Abed, President of the Syrian Republic, to use his influence to end "repressive" French measures and grant amnesty to convicted rioters. He refused until the disorders are stopped.

(Syrian Nationalists are protesting against dissolution of their party and French rule. Numbers have been killed in recent disorders.)

Slayer Thanks Court For Gallows Sentence

Globe, Ariz., Feb. 13 (AP).—An Apache Indian, Earl Gardner, the ax-slayer of his wife and baby, thanked the judge who sentenced him today to the gallows.

"I want you to get a strong rope," Gardner told United States District Judge Albert M. Sames. "I want it to happen immediately."

After hearing sentence pronounced and the execution set for May 1, Gardner said: "Thank you. May I shake hands with you?"

Judge Sames declined, saying, "the court has other business."

Gardner hacked his wife and baby to death last December 8, rather than mind the infant while Mrs. Gardner attended church.

Born in Indianapolis, Sullivan was a graduate of Rose Polytechnic Institute in Indiana. He received a degree of bachelor of science in mechanical engineering.

Later he received his master's degree of science at Lehigh University, and for four years was instructor in engineering there.

He worked with a mining company in Mexico from 1906 to 1907. In the latter year he returned and worked at the Army War College here as a translator.

In 1909 Sullivan received his appointment to the consular service, and was sent to a Paz, Mexico, in May of the same year.

In December, 1914, he was transferred to Newcastle, Australia, as American consul there. In 1921 he was assigned to the State Department. After a year here he was transferred to Cadiz, Spain. In 1926 he was transferred to Cienfuegos, Cuba, where he remained on duty until 1931. He was then sent to Mantanzas, also in Cuba, where he stayed until 1933.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary L. Sullivan, and three brothers, Clarence and Leslie Sullivan, of Indianapolis, and Fred Sullivan, of Chicago.

Oakland, Calif., Feb. 13 (AP).—Hospital attendants guessed Nancy Lee Vogt's weight at a pound or more today as the smallest infant on record here gained strength in her cotton-lined incubator. She weighed a pound when prematurely born 12 days ago to Mrs. Paul Vogt, but dropped to 15 ounces.

Henderson, 70, Dies, Retailer Here 50 Years

Operated Tobacco Shop Founded by His Father Before Civil War.

Bred to his business in the store his father operated in the downtown section of Washington in Civil War days, Henderson was proprietor of the R. M. Henderson Co., at Fourteenth street and New York avenue northwest.

Fifty years ago he entered the firm founded by his father.

For the past year Henderson had been inactive because of his failing health, and his son, Jules, ran the business. Mr. Henderson was a thirty-second degree Mason.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Lilly Henderson, his son, and two daughters, Mrs. Rebecca Sibley and Miss Gladys Henderson.

Funeral services will be held at his residence tomorrow morning at an hour to be announced later. Burial, with Masonic rites, will follow in Congressional Cemetery.

School Whippings Legal in Maryland

Baltimore, Feb. 13 (AP).—Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor—himself the father of four children of school age—ruled today that corporal punishment may be inflicted in Maryland schools, "but only as a last resort."

His opinion was given in answer to a request for a ruling from James H. Pugh, State's attorney of Montgomery County. Parents of pupils at the Takoma-Silver Spring Junior High School recently held a mass meeting to ask repeal of a State law under which Principal W. B. Marks had whipped several students.

Pugh had been asked to secure an opinion as to the legality of the whippings.

3 Children Die in Fire As Mother Goes for Aid

Bishop, Calif., Feb. 13 (AP).—Three children were burned to death early today in a cabin fire while the step-mother, expecting a child, struggled barefoot 250 yards through 4 feet of snow, crying for aid.

The woman, Mrs. Roy E. Pitts, 29, awoke at midnight in the Chestview Lodge cabin, 30 miles north of here to discover the fire. Her husband was away on a night job.

Panic-stricken, she fled outside to seek assistance. Roy, jr., 8; Rita, 6, and Robert, 3, were the victims.

Of the three kinds you must choose between—straight whiskey that's unblended, whiskey that's blended with neutral spirits, or a blend of straight whiskies which contains nothing but straight whiskies—we believe the third type is undoubtedly superior. And when it's a perfect blend of top-grade, all straight, all American whiskies—then it's the finest.

That's why we say... only the name of Four Roses could be signed to such an advertisement as this.

Because Four Roses is blended by Frankfort in the way that 70 years of fine whiskey-making have taught. We take several straight whiskies, each of especially noble flavor or smoothness or body or bouquet, and combine them into one magnificent liquor gifted with all those qualities the seasoned drinker seeks—a liquor immeasurably greater than any one of those worthy straight whiskies alone.

Lots of drinkers know all this—lots more are learning and appreciating it more and more every day.

We don't expect or even wish you to believe these truths about whiskey solely on our say-so. We only ask you to taste Four Roses to prove that the finest whiskey you can buy is a blend of all straight, all American whiskies... and the name of that whiskey is Four Roses!

Four Roses — IT'S A PERFECT BLEND — OF ALL STRAIGHT — ALL AMERICAN WHISKIES

Tuberculosis Hospital Patients, In All Stages, Herded Together

Institution at Fourteenth and Upshur Streets Overtaxed as Others in District; Dying Crowded in With Convalescents.

With health items trimmed deeply by the Bureau of the Budget, the 1937 District budget is now receiving Congressional consideration. The Washington Post desires that this city have the best health department in the Nation. This is one of a series of articles designed to show Congress the District's health needs.

By Gerald G. Gross.

A trip through Tuberculosis Hospital, Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest, is less depressing than one through Gallinger. Perhaps it is because the place is tidier or the patients seem brighter but, whatever the reason, it isn't that this old red brick structure is an ideal haven for sufferers from the white plague.

Like the medical-surgical department at Gallinger, which is the city's municipal hospital for indigents and folks in the lowest income brackets, Tuberculosis keeps its white patients in one half of the building and Negroes in the other half.

Right now the census stands at 227 patients, slightly less than one-third of them being colored. In state of physical condition, they range from the dying stage to the ambulatory type who are well enough to go down to the dining room for their meals and play checkers in the toilet rooms.

The latter is the only recreational space available when the inmates wish to play checkers or rummy.

Tuberculosis Hospital was opened July 1, 1928, for the accommodation of the District's tuberculous indigent. It was equipped to take care of 125 persons. Since then porches have been added to the east and west wings, open-air wards have been inclosed for all-year-around use and 11 iron shanties distributed over the spacious grounds, thereby increasing the efficient, comfortable capacity to 175 or 180.

Official figures for January, submitted yesterday by Supt. J. W. Peabody to the Board of Public Welfare, disclosed that the average daily tenancy last month was 226.

A stranger, entering the building, naturally looks for the "information" sign. Unfortunately, I did not notice whether there is such a shingle on the office cage immediately to your left as you come in, but anyway this is the place where your questions will be answered.

The clerk here inclosed is responsible not only for dispensing information but also for acting as secretary to Dr. Peabody, operating the telephone switchboard, keeping the institution's books and performing other routine duties. It may take the superintendent several hours to dictate a couple of short letters.

Directly across the corridor is what is technically known as the X-ray room but which also must serve as a chamber of conference, social calls upon resident physicians and internes and so forth.

But consideration of doctors' conveniences, or inconveniences, may seem beside the point when men and women, white and black, are hemorrhaging their lives away upstairs. Even if it is true that the medical-administrative staff is cruelly housed, that few of the common decencies provided personnel by private hospitals are accorded here, the welfare of the patients is of primary importance.

So I went upstairs and found overcrowded wards, in which the more seriously afflicted cough into the faces of convalescents, aggravating their condition; one-time recreation space crowded with beds and patients who should be in private rooms heaped in 16 and 18 bed community wards to the disadvantage of themselves, their fellows and their doctors.

I saw men and women who are so far along on the road to recovery that they are allowed to spend a half-day outside on their own every couple of weeks, and I saw others so critically ill that even to turn over in bed might produce a fatal hemorrhage. And when I saw these dying people I suddenly remembered that the Bureau of the Budget had ordered Tuberculosis Hospital closed December 31 and its patients transferred to the adult sanitarium being erected at Glenn Dale, Md.

I hope I'm present on New Year's Eve when they pick up one little boy I saw—if he is still alive then—and say, "Look, son, the Budget Bureau is giving you a nice trip to Glenn Dale."

No, I've changed my mind. I hope I'm far, far away. On several occasions I have had opportunities to witness executions and I always declined.

There are lots of statistics that could be cited pertaining to use and maintenance and government support of Tuberculosis Hospital, but why bring them up? Damning as they are, they seem quite impotent after an inspection of those toilets which have to be used as game rooms, recreation rooms that had to be turned into wards, wards that are congested almost beyond endurance, resident physicians' bed chambers that are not much larger than a telephone booth.

Washington's tuberculosis problem is becoming more acute with each passing year and appropriations for its control are not keeping pace. An ironical sidelight is that the Health Department recently inaugurated a case-finding campaign. What is going to happen to the people, given free X-ray examinations at chest clinics who are found to have infected lungs?

Tuberculosis Hospital is filled up. Gallinger's 158 tuberculosis beds are full, and when 60 more are added in the next few months they will be occupied immediately. The same thing goes for the 400 at Glenn Dale adult sanitarium. Also for the children's institution at Glenn Dale, now half open, which will have a total capacity of 300.

It isn't cricket, to say the least.

Paris Socialist Beaten; French Ban Royalists

Deputy Attacked in Street; League Publication Offices Raided.

Paris, Feb. 13.—The French cabinet, yielding to demands from Socialists whose leader was beaten in a street fight, ordered tonight the dissolution of all militant Royalist organizations in France.

The decree, Royalist leaders countered, "means nothing."

Publication of the order followed an emergency session of Premier Albert Sarraut's cabinet after stormy parliamentary scenes in which the Center joined Socialists in heaping blame on the Royalists for the attack on Leon Blum, Socialist Party leader.

Blum was pounced upon by members of the "King's Henchmen," a younger group of the Action Francaise League, as the deputy was waiting in his automobile for the funeral procession of Jacques Bainville, eminent historian and founder of the league, to pass.

The young Royalists, Socialists charged, dragged the deputy from his automobile, beat him with canse and rolled him in the street. Only because several bricklayers working nearby hastened to Blum's rescue were more serious injuries averted, the Socialists declared.

Immediately following the dissolution order, police visited the Action Francaise headquarters, seized documents and demanded a list of the organization's members.

Their request was denied by Leon Daudet and Charles Maurras, Action leaders, who were busy preparing tomorrow's edition of the league's newspaper, L'Action Francaise."

Investigation on a charge of provocation to murder opened against Maurras for articles in the newspaper.

The inquiry was directed particularly to the article published January 13 in which the league's organ asked "good Frenchmen" to keep a list of the 140 deputies who favored sanctions against Italy "so you may know against whom to strike" if the sanctions led to war.

Blum was hurried to a hospital. Doctors said a vein in his temple had been opened by blows, causing loss of blood.

The cabinet's order was specifically directed against three militant Royalist organizations—the Action Francaise League, the Camelots du Roi (King's Henchmen) with headquarters in the league offices, and the National Federation of Students of the Action Francaise.

President Albert Lebrun signed the order, which the cabinet decreed was in accordance with the law of January 10, 1936, providing for the suppression of political rioting.

Earlier, Premier Sarraut had promised the Chamber of Deputies he would take swift action against the attackers of Deputy Blum.

As news of the Blum assault filtered through the city, socialist organizations were reported mobilizing in various sections. Police guards were thrown around Royalist headquarters even as Socialist threats to desert the Radical Socialist government were being heard in legislative halls.

Dr. R. F. Walter is acting commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, taking the position held by the late Dr. Elwood Mead.

John E. Jenkins (F), Internal Revenue, originator of various forms, is looking forward to the banquet of approximately 350 former soldier-writers at the Hotel Astor, New York, February 22. Mr. Jenkins was on the editorial staff of the Stars and Stripes, famous newspaper of the A. E. F. He is also the author of many short stories.

William H. Tschappat (P), War, has introduced a new invention, said to be of great military importance. It is a suspension for vehicles, which may be applied to a pair of levers carrying the wheels of the vehicle. It comprises an elastic cushioning member disposed between the arm of the levers to insure flexibility about the tubes.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation's theater group has won many compliments for its presentation of "A Game of Chess" this week at Roosevelt High School, under direction of Lawrence Beckerman (C).

An "in service training course" in technical shorthand speed writing will be offered by the Graduate School of Agriculture, under direction of Clara E. Richter. Employes are advised to apply to A. F. Wood, school director, in room 4090 South Building.

New Postal Merit System.

C. B. Uttley, superintendent of the postoffice service, Postoffice Department, announces a plan for a new merit system in that department. Some of the effects of the new scheme, he said, would be:

To eliminate the human element in rating postal workers for promotion; to give the worker a chance to wipe out demerits with merits, and to separate demerits from a man's efficiency rating so that one or two "unfortunate incidents" would not ruin a man's chance for promotion.

Uttley said that all "black" marks against postal workers will be wiped from the books on March 31, and after that the slate will be wiped clean at the end of every fiscal year. A man having 500 demerits at the end of a year will still be subject to reduction in pay and 700 demerits will be sufficient for a man's dismissal from the service.

Checking Hiawatha Story.

Dr. J. N. B. Hewitt, ethnologist of the Bureau of American Ethnology, Smithsonian, has recently gathered some new details regarding the Iroquois legend of Hiawatha. Minnehaha, the lovely Laughing Water, he says, was murdered by her brother-in-law. Her real name is unknown, and it certainly was not Laughing Water, according to Dr. Hewitt, but that does not affect the significance of the story that he is placing, step by step, on a historical basis. He is working with details furnished nearly 40 years ago by a blind Iroquois ritual leader who was one of the last to have kept uncontaminated the story of his people. Although the story of Hiawatha becomes overloaded with legendary and supernatural happenings, Dr. Hewitt has been able to check the details sufficiently to indicate considerable historical validity.

Joint Meeting Today.

Department of Labor Lodge, No. 12, American Federation of Government Employes, and the Labor Department branch of Local No. 2, National Federation of Federal Employes, are jointly sponsoring a talk on "The Necessity for the Organization of Government Employes" to be given at 4:40 p. m. today in hearing room B, Interstate Commerce Commission. The speaker, Gilbert Hyatt, is one of the original organizers of the N. F. F. E. and is the legislative representative of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks.

This meeting, to which the public is invited, is the first of a series arranged by the joint educational committee of both unions in the Labor Department. Subsequent speakers will include Mary Van Kleeck, of the Russell Sage Foundation, and William Leiserson, of the National Mediation Board.

Bruno in Tears At Leibowitz Prison Parley

Mrs. McLean Prime Mover in Bringing Lawyer Into Case.

with Hicks, "who brought her message to me."

"It was Mrs. McLean alone who interested me in this case," he said. "No other person or organization is identified with me in this matter."

Only 2 at Conference.

When Leibowitz visits Hauptmann Sunday, he will probably do so alone. Mrs. Hauptmann will not accompany him, as women are not allowed in the prison Saturday afternoons or Sundays.

The lawyer came to the prison today after Hauptmann made a personal request to Col. Mark O. Kimberling, principal keeper, that he be permitted to talk to him.

Kimberling communicated immediately with C. Lloyd Fisher, chief defense counsel, who spent an hour with Hauptmann at noontime, and then gave permission for his client to talk to Leibowitz.

Fisher said Hauptmann told him he would not change his story, and that Leibowitz would have to believe it. Leibowitz said yesterday in New York that "any person with the least bit of discernment can place little credence in the fish stories told in Bruno's behalf from the witness stand in the Flemington courtroom."

Hauptmann insisted at Flemington, where he was convicted a year ago tonight, that he knew nothing about the Lindbergh crime and that he obtained the $14,000 ransom money found in his possession from Isidor Fisch, his furrier partner who died in Germany.

Asked what he would do should Leibowitz enter the case, Fisher replied:

"If he (Hauptmann) made any change in his story, I would be greatly surprised. If the facts differed, I would be constrained to leave the case.

No Change in Story.

"We have gone down the line on the story as told. There will be no alterations to meet any request. The story told is the one I believe to be true. It is inconceivable that any other will be told."

Fisher quoted Hauptmann as saying:

"I have told the truth and the whole truth and there will be no change in my story even to the dotting of an 'I' or the crossing of a 'T.' I have only one story to tell and he (Leibowitz) will have to believe it."

Hauptmann's 30-day reprieve from death expires Saturday.

Mrs. McLean Silent.

Samuel S. Leibowitz was brought into last-minute efforts to save the life of Bruno Richard Hauptmann by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, it was reliably learned here yesterday.

Mrs. McLean, wealthy Washington socialite, who paid $100,000 to Gaston B. Means in an abortive attempt to ransom the Lindbergh child, declined to be quoted on her latest role.

On authoritative sources, it was reported, however, that Leibowitz and Mrs. McLean held a conference at her home here last Sunday, at which it was agreed the lawyer would take the case without fee provided Hauptmann woud promise "to tell the whole story."

Mrs. McLean, it was learned, called Leibowitz to the conference on her own initiative. Robert W. Hicks, Washington criminologist hired by Gov. Hoffman of New Jersey to aid him in his investigation of the crime, was asked by Mrs. McLean to get in touch with the lawyer and request him to come to Washington.

The first announcement of Mrs. McLean's interest came from Leibowitz in New York. He said the Washington heiress had brought him into the case.

No Financing Involved.

Mrs. McLean countered here with this statement:

"I have been asked by the press today whether I financed the recent legal steps in the Hauptmann case. My answer is that I have neither done so nor obligated myself to do so.

"My only interest is the same as that of thousands of other citizens who are not satisfied with the termination of the case. It is badly tangled and confused. There are far too many loose ends. No person who took part in this outrageous crime shoul descape detection and punishment.

"In my opinion, Gov. Hoffman has commendable courage in his effort to have the case brought to a more reasonable and sensible conclusion."

In her first effort to solve the crime—the attempt involving Means—Mrs. McLean apparently got nothing for her $100,000. Means was sent to the penitentiary for this act. The money was never recovered.

Minneapolis, Feb. 13 (AP).—Defense testimony in the trial of Isadore (Kid Cann) Blumenfeld, charged with first-degree murder in the slaying of Walter Liggett, newspaper publisher, was completed in Judge Arthur Selover's district court today.

Thomas McMeekin, counsel for "The Kid," said the defense would rest immediately upon convening of court tomorrow. The remainder of the day is expetced to be devoted to rebuttal by the State, with indications the case would go to the jury Monday.

Witnesses for the defendant endeavored to substantiate his alleged alibi he was in a downtown barber shop at 5:41 p. m., December 9, when a leering machine gunner killed the publisher as he prepared to leave his car to enter his apartment.

3 More Bodies Recovered; Fire Toll Reaches 10

4 Still Missing After Blaze in New Jersey Hotel; Cause Studied.

By the Associated Press.

Lakewood, N. J., Feb. 13.—Out of the block ruins of the Victoria Mansion Hotel a bank of WPA workers and firemen dug three more bodies today, bringing to ten the total of known dead in the Lincoln Day fire. Four persons, still unaccounted for, are thought to have perished in the flames.

Two of the three bodies found today were identified. One was that of Mrs. Gertrude Marko, 35, of Jackson Heights, Long Island, and the other that of Bernard Bernstein, 30, head waiter at the hotel.

Police officials said that from the standpoint of safety appliances the hotel was the best equipped in Lakewood.

Dr. G. W. McMillan, chairman of the Lakewood township committee, said "somebody failed" to take the proper action to prevent the fire. He asserted Lakewood needed a stricter code of fire regulations.

The cause of the blaze in the three-story, 65-room hotel has not yet been determined.

Panic Blamed in Fire.

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Panic was held responsible by two city officials today for the loss of six lives in a fire that swept through Lum's Chinese Restaurant during a church dinner last night.

Fire Commissioner John J. McElligott and Building Commissioner Samuel Fassler concurred in the belief that there would have been no loss of life if the 150 diners had remained calm and left the second-floor resort in orderly fashion.

"It is just another case of panic where people invariably will try to get out the same door in which they entered," Fassler said.

Fire Commissioner McElligott said the blaze itself was not particularly extensive. Pending a complete investigation he attributed the fire, which caused property damage of $75,000, to a short circuit. No negligence or suspicious circumstances had been found, he said.

In addition to the four men and two women who were killed, more than two score persons were injured in the wild rush for exits.

Business in U.S. At 5-Year Peak, Sibley Asserts

Commerce Chamber Head Declares 'Artificial Props' Unneeded.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said today the economic condition of the Nation, "despite the disturbing factors" of Government, is at the highest level in the past five years.

"It is a pleasure," Sibley said, in addressing the Life Underwriters Association of New York City, "to be able to point to some new high records in business.

"More shoes were turned out last year than in any earlier year. More wool went into manufacture than in any other peace-time year. We can conclude that the 128,000,000 people now in the United States were better shod and better clothed than for many a year."

Steel Industry Normal.

The steel industry, at the end of 1935, Sibley said, had returned to employment at pre-depression volume with wage rates "as high as were ever paid in peace time."

"The energies which have been awakened," he said, "practically assure us that we shall not in the spring and summer lose any of the progress we have made. We shall hold our own."

Business, he said, seeks the "complete return to a basis of economic activity that is self-sustaining, resting on firm ground, with the artificial props no longer necessary."

Two Questions Cited.

"There are two very broad questions of public policy that seem to me to be of paramount importance in this quest," he added.

"First, I should mention the need of sound fiscal policies. So long as we have public spending continuing in excess of public revenues, we are exposed to a whole series of threats for the future * * *.

"Second of these broader questions of public policy I should mention the combined threat of Government competition with private industry and Government regulation of private industry."

Lots' Sales Scored.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 13.—W. Carl Richards, president of the Cumberland Land Co., has filed objections with the circut court to the ratification of the sale of a number of lots of his company in the Braddock road section, delinquent for taxes, claiming the advertisement of the sale was "false and misleading."

Sparks In Eastern Asia.

Surprising no one, the cables bring news of increasing skirmishes along the frontier between Manchukuo and Outer Mongolia. Puppet is engaging puppet: pulling one set of strings is the hand of Tokyo, while Moscow pulls the other.

With relative quiet reigning on the North China front, Japan has turned its attention to Manchukuo, particularly as it borders on the U. S. S. R. to the north and Outer Mongolia to the west. In event of another Russo-Japanese war the fighting would almost certainly begin at these points of contact, where even now friction has begun to generate.

Nominally, Outer Mongolia is an autonomous state. Actually, Soviet Russia brought about its independence from China in much the same manner that Japan established Manchukuo. Gradually the Trans-Siberian Railroad is being extended toward Outer Mongolia and, with double-tracking already completed through a good part of the Soviet's maritime province north of Manchukuo, Japan sees its unrecognized mainland holdings becoming less secure.

To rationalize its anxious activity in building up the security of Manchukuo, Japan argues that of the five million Mongols in Eastern Asia today only 760,000 live in Outer Mongolia. They claim two million are to be found in Manchukuo, 1,250,000 in and about Inner Mongolia and the remaining million within the influence of Russia. A reunion of these divided peoples is inevitable, Japan submits. If so, it could be expected to develop without Japanese stimulus. But the Tokyo militarists seem to have decided to speed up the process. This helps to explain the present clashes along the Manchukuo-Outer Mongolia border.

A convenient casus belli lies in the fact that the precise border markings between the two states have long been disputed. Last year a conference to settle the line and to arrange for regular communications across it proved abortive. Thus, armed men now meeting in the disputed territory strike sparks on the others' righteousness. It is an altogether uneasy situation.

The Importance Of Taxing.

A mere pruning of budgetary appropriations at the command of the President, or cancellation of unused authorizations to spend, will make very little impression upon the deficit for the coming fiscal year. The sums that might be saved by revising paper estimates of prospective outlays would be but a drop in the bucket compared with the expenditures to which the Administration stands committed so long as it clings to its plans for subsidizing farmers and financing the extravagant work-relief program.

Pending radical reforms in governmental spending policies, therefore, a reduction in the size of the deficit must be achieved by voting new taxes. Indeed, if the deficit is to be prevented from rising sharply during the coming year, it will be necessary to replace the revenue lost by invalidation of the processing taxes and to make provision for covering a part of the cost of bonus payments.

The Treasury is reported to have drafted several tax measures, one of which would eliminate exemptions for married people in computing surtaxes on incomes over $10,000. To make a substantial impression upon the deficit, however, the public will have to pay until it hurts, either through a broadening of the basis of income taxation to include a much larger proportion of the people, or by an extension of special or general sales taxes, or by both means.

Even assuming that the President is prepared to recommend, and that Congress is willing to vote new levies of this sort, the country will not be within hailing distance of a balanced budget. Nevertheless, the best way to force home the necessity of retrenchment is to vote additional taxes. However inadequate they may be, they make the public realize that somebody has to pay for governmental spending. That is the first step in the direction of reform. Such painful reminders dissipate the apathy with which an untaxed people are often lured along the road that leads to national bankruptcy.

A Dangerous Short-Cut.

Senator Norris, together with a considerable number of other admirable citizens, sincerely believes that the majority of the Supreme Court made a terrible mistake when it declared the AAA unconstitutional. "That decision," the Senator declared, "cannot stand if our country is to live and prosper."

After such a sweeping statement, a full analysis of the court's "error," and of Mr. Norris' own plan to curb its powers, might properly be anticipated. But instead of working out this difficult problem the Senator was content to fill a few pages of the Congressional Record with quotations indicating what various historical characters have thought of the Supreme Court.

This refusal to confront the issue squarely is significant. The court decided that Congress has no authority to regulate agricultural production. Not a single critic of that decision has been able to point out wherein the Constitution grants such authority to Congress. And they must necessarily admit that until such a grant is provided this power is still held by the States. In effect, therefore, Senator Norris is arguing that during emergencies the Supreme Court should take the liberty of distorting the Constitution. Thus he seeks to impose upon that body a far greater responsibility than any it has exercised to date.

The proposal that statutes should be invalidated only by unanimous agreement of the justices is a direct outcome of this line of thinking. In practice this would mean that an act of Congress could continue to be enforced even though eight of the nine justices considered it an encroachment upon the fundamental law. That would be merely an undercover way of abolishing constitutional safeguards against undemocratic legislation and arbitrary administration. It is possible, of course, that the people may some day conclude that such safeguards are no longer necessary. But that is a decision which can be properly made only by the people. It should never be left to the discretion of a single Supreme Court justice.

If Senator Norris is loath to let the decision of the majority stand, it would be logical for him to propose that acts of Congress should also be adopted only by unanimous vote. His proposal to limit the powers of the Supreme Court should certainly be subjected to such a test. And this is no mere reduction to absurdity. It emphasizes the incontestable truth that to require unanimity at any step in the process of democratic government is to create control by a recalcitrant minority.

One other aspect of the movement to undermine the Constitution by striking at the Supreme Court deserves more consideration than it has yet received. Last Monday the court demolished a Louisiana statute which the late Huey Long designed to gag the press of that State. For this action it has been applauded by many of the same short-sighted critics who advocate curtailment of the court's power because of its AAA decision. It should be obvious that a tribunal too weak to restrain Congress from usurpation of regulatory powers reserved to the States would also be too weak to safeguard the Bill of Rights against the encroachment of incipient American Hitlers.

Herein lies the unrealized danger of threats to change our system of government by short-cuts, designed to circumvent one somewhat unpopular judicial decision. Such procedure is comparable to setting fire to a house because its owner has fallen down stairs.

Parties And Issues.

In his Lincoln's birthday address before the National Republican Club of New York, Senator Vandenberg made his tribute to the Civil War President as the conventional preface to discussion of present-day political issues. However, he uttered a much-needed warning against the cheap partisanship that would try to claim Lincoln for the Republican Party. As the Senator said, the appeal of this great man "transcended party lines; his life served all; and his memory belongs to all Americans, regardless of race, color, politics, or creed."

In the present campaign it is assuredly most important to maintain a clear distinction between the assurances of party leaders and the character of fundamental issues. Otherwise, questions of vital concern to the American people will be lost to sight in a turmoil of embittered debate where personalities rather than principles are the subject of discussion. The Lincoln tradition is the opposite of that technique.

Senator Vandenberg's reminder of this danger is not only opportune, but was also a fitting introduction to a declaration that he personally "would welcome Jeffersonian co-operation—not only in the battle line, but subsequently in the council chamber." As this remark signalizes Mr. Vandenberg's entry as a candidate for the Republican nomination, his attitude is of major significance.

Of course New Deal policies did not create, but merely accentuated, the schismatic influences long at work within the ranks of both major parties. In making an appeal for non-partisan support, therefore, the Michigan Senator is simply calling upon voters to cast aside pretense and to forswear traditional allegiances which have ceased to have real meaning.

In so doing, he has set a good example for all Presidential candidates. The people should be admonished to study programs and to vote as they think, instead of clinging to party labels that no longer have any vital significance of principle.

Another Blantonism.

While Representative Blanton has changed his tune, it is still sour. A few days ago he characterized the admirable efforts of the District Medical Society to arouse interest in the acute local health problem as a "damned mass meeting." Now, in a letter to Dr. Ruffin, president of the society, he thanks the local medical fraternity for taking the matter of public health off his shoulders. Perhaps it is not superfluous to explain that in this Mr. Blanton is trying to be sarcastic.

Even if this letter merited any consideration as a defense of the absurd position Mr. Blanton has assumed, much of it would have to be discounted as utterly misleading. He pretends to have been working diligently "to find the needed money (for the Health Department) without any increased burden of taxation on the Washington pepole." The fact is that the local budget, as it was sent to Congress, leaves a prospective surplus of $3,500,000 in the Treasury to the District's credit, even with the niggardly Federal allowance for truly national functions of the Capital City remaining at a record low figure. Ample funds are available. All Mr. Blanton's committee has been asked to do is to recommend adequate appropriations for the community welfare, within a balanced budget.

But facts seem incidental in Congressman Blanton's sphere of action. Apparently he is no more interested in a full and accurate statement of the case than he is in the health of Washington. The real significance of his letter to Dr. Ruffin is that it further reveals the violent prejudices which makes it impossible for him properly to serve as chairman of the District Appropriations Sub-Committee.

Many other Representatives and Senators have commended the purpose of next Sunday's mass meeting, which is simply to emphasize the urgent need of funds to rescue the city from the menace of uncontrolled contagious diseases, Mr. Blanton alone has conjured up the preposterous assumption that this committee wishes to intimidate Congress or take over a Congressional function. Adding insult to injury, he seeks to distort the sincere efforts of the group of civic leaders who are working to prevent unnecessary suffering and death.

Perhaps Mr. Blanton is so annoyed because the Medical Society did not approach him privately and attempt to work out a "gentleman's agreement" on public health appropriations. Whatever his motive may have been, however, he has thoroughly terminated his usefulness as chairman of the District Appropriations Sub-Committee. The obvious duty of the House now is to take the local supply bill out of the hands of this would-be local boss and refer it to the District Committee, to which it should have been sent in the first place. In that way a burden would be off the shoulders of Washington and Mr. Blanton simultaneously.

Good Work.

After many years the law has finally caught up with "Dutch" Irwin. Long known for his defiance of District authority in various illegal enterprises, he had been arrested and indicted on four occasions in the past, but each time had succeeded in wriggling out of prosecution. Now, at last, luck has turned against him. The "smart guy" has been outsmarted. Together with six others, he has been found guilty on seven counts for operating a gambling house and receiving bets on races. They all face adequate jail sentences.

Credit for this clean sweep is shared by the police and the District Attorney's office. The men were picked up in October, following a sudden raid on a Fourteenth street establishment which proved to be one of the most elaborate gambling halls yet uncovered in these parts. This week the District Attorney's staff presented its case and, reassuringly enough, won a verdict of guilty on every one of its points.

Congratulations are in order. More of this sort of work and Washington's disgraceful reputation for unabashed lawlessness will brighten considerably.

"I question the morality of a young girl who dyes her hair," asserts a minister. Evidently he thinks the bad dye young.

Nations may bury hatchets, but they never bury those axes they have to grind.

Cautious Economy.

From the St. Louis Star-Times.

So certain is it that excess spending at Washington must be curtailed or inflation is inevitable, that even the meager bits of information coming from the White House recently are encouraging.

There are two vital aspects to the financial crisis facing the country. The first and less important is Treasury resources. The last published statement shows approximately $1,950,000,000 on hand which would last about six or seven months if the present rate of excess expenditures of $300,000,000 a month was maintained without further taxes or borrowings.

The second and more important aspect is Government credit. One of the arguments frequently heard in the Presidential campaign of 1932 was that Government credit was already badly impaired through the Treasury raids and heavy borrowings during the Hoover Administration. When Roosevelt took office the National debt was $22,000,000,000. Today it is over $31,000,000,000 and is mounting at such a rate that it is expected to reach $35,000,000,000 by June 30, 1937.

Christian Science.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of February 10 Dr. Russell J. Clinchy is quoted as saying: "The main difference between Roman Catholicism and Christian Science is that the Roman Catholic Church has placed the confession of sin at the center of its worship and the Christian Scientist has attempted to eliminate any recognition of sin at all. Because of that one difference, the Catholic Church will be vital and strong in that future in which Christian Science will only be known as a story of a curious cult of the Twentieth century."

It is an interesting fact that many people have the mistaken belief that Christian Scientists ignore sin. However, the chief purpose of Christian Science is to take away the sins of the world. It is therefore necessary to recognize sin or error in the human thought for what it is and destroy it through the understanding of the Christ Truth.

As to the second allegation of Dr. Clinchy's that "Christian Science will only be known as a story of a curious cult of the Twentieth century," it is rather surprising in this day of enlightenment to see that statement made about a recognized Christian denomination. Mary Baker Eddy from the age of 12 years was a member of the Congregational Church in which Dr. Clinchy is a minister. In the establishment of the Christian Science Church she never relinquished her belief in the one Christ, and Christian Scientists recognize Christ Jesus as their Way-shower which I am quite sure would not place this denomination in the class of cults.

The history of the Christian Science Church distinctly refutes the allegation that it "will only be known as a story." Its continued substantial growth and the accentance of Christian Science by increasing numbers of intelligent people is prophetic of its progress and permanency. It is founded upon the Rock, Christ.

Bus Transgressions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A letter signed "Whataboutit" in The Post of February 11, calling attention to traffic violations by bus drivers is timely and to the point. As I am at times a bus-rider and a driver of my own car, I have, for a number of years, noticed and been endangered by such infractions of the law as these:

Buses stop opposite to or closer than 25 feet to a safety zone, thus blocking all traffic in back of them. They stop in street intersections and on cross walks or in the middle of a block. (Traffic Regulations, Article V, Section 11). Very rarely do they pull closer that 5 to 10 feet of the curb when they are taking on or letting off passengers, even when there is no obstruction in the way. (Art. V, Sec. 15.)

Drivers straddle the white line when roadways are divided into lanes, thus shutting off two-lane traffic. They "weave" from one lane to another without regard to vehicles on either side of them and without signalling. (Sec. 24.)

They "hog" the road and frequently will not permit an overtaking vehicle to pass. (Sec. 25C). This is particularly true on narrow roads in the suburbs.

Hand signals are virtually unknown. Buses pull out of line, pull away from the curb and turn corners without a signal of any kind. (Art. VI, Sec. 21). Many times I have seen cars caught in traps, even pinched between the bus and a street car because of these unlawful tactics.

I have never witnessed a traffic officer making an attempt to enforce the regulations against bus drivers. There are now so many buses on the streets that it is dangerous to life and property to permit them to run wild, unregulated and without fear of the law.

No Crops In Congress.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of February 7, "Vox Populi" gave us a verbal picture of some disillusioned North Dakota farmers. It might have been called, "Discontented cows in planned pastures." How could it be otherwise? No cow wants to shew its cud to a cadence prescribed even by its owner. So even North Dakota farmers can be excused for not liking to chew on a standardized "cud" prepared for the purpose by a mob of governmental "cow college graduates."

They are especially excusable when they find that the nourishing element, "the profit vitamin," is being nullified by the presence of such bacteria as higher living costs and higher taxes. A farmer may be a "hick" but that is no reason to suppose that his brain quit growing before he learned how to add and subtract.

The waters of the ocean are full of gold. Why doesn't Congress go into the matter? They should worry if the cost of extraction is greater than that of the value of the gold extracted. Won't the people have to pay for the cyaniding process?

And who are the people, that we should dare obstruct the march of progress? Why should we count costs, or question expediency, or doubt their judgment? Didn't we elect them, aren't they our "best minds?"

What does a farmer know about farming; or a sheep man about sheep; or a railroad man about railroads—nothing. Government and Congress know it all.

Go sit in the corner Americans. Your mark is zero.

The Airport Menace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Before a joint session of the Senate and House Military Affairs Committee, the chairman, Mr. McSwain, attempted to have forever fixed at a price of at least $12,500 per acre the valuation of some four acres of land contained in the bed of Military road, which bisects the Washington-Hoover Airport. Under the pretense of closing this road, he would have given Government-owned land away to Virginia and at the same time gained for that State an exorbitant price for land that cost it nothing. This was attempted under the guise of "Saving Human Lives," which purpose could have been better accomplished by his asking for the closing of Washington-Hoover Airport as a menace. Why should the powerful chairman of Military Affairs be interested in saving a private enterprise which is a menace to all traffic on a Government-owned road? This road cost the Government $45,000 many years ago to build and is necessary to traffic between Washington and the South.

Any other private enterprise, except Washington-Hoover Airport, would be ousted to protect the lives of the public and Government property if it were the known menace that Washington-Hoover Airport is. The road is not the menace but the privately owned airport is the menace.

T. R. Said It.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of the 11th, a correspondent refers to the Supreme Court as the "Nine Old Men" and claims ignorance of the origin of the term.

If my recollection serves me right, President Theodore Roosevelt first made the application. After a decision of the court, which he strongly disapproved, he said, "The Supreme Court is made of nine old men who know a good deal about law, but very little about life!"

White House Parking?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Two brilliant suggestions have recently been made for solving our local traffic and parking problems, in addition to the regular recurring recommendations of widening more streets, by cutting down more shade trees. It is just possible that the discovery has finally been made that no matter how much a street has been widened it has only two curbs, and if these are solidly occupied day and night by immovable stored cars there still will be no room left for parking.

But the latest masterly suggestions are (a) to use Franklin square for another parking lot, and (b) to abolish Dupont circle. These recommendations are fine so far as they go, but why stop with Franklin square and Dupont circle? Why not turn all of our public park areas into parking lots, including Lafayette square and the White House grounds?

All the rest of the space now wasted in century-old trees, flowering shrubs, gardens and fountains could then be turned into an open parking lot, adorned with huge yellow signs in tasteful conformity with the rest of the growing modern landscape in the heart of the Nation's Capital. The Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial, likewise, take up a lot of unnecessary space, and should be pulled down at once to keep up with the march of progress in "the most beautiful city in the world," for the ground that they now uselessly encumber would accommodate quite a few stationary cars.

Of course there are a few old fogeys, survivors of horse-and-buggy days, who might protest that trees and parks and fountains and gardens have both beauty and utility and are essential in a congested city for breathing space and as a relief to harassed nerves and tired eyes. These may even venture the reminder that not even in earlier days was one allowed to store his horse and buggy for unlimited periods of time all over the crowded areas of a large city.

What consideration is of the slightest importance today except to cram more and more "private locomotives" into our public streets, in order to maintain our present 100 per cent American, chaotic, wasteful, unco-ordinated, every-man-for-himself system of individual transportation to the wonderment of the rest of the world at "the American incapacity for working out any adequate system of public transportation," to which Arnold Bennett and many others have called attention.

American Housing Ideas.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of February 11 Mr. Felix Bruner had a great deal to say about the Government's building plans; that the houses are to be built around a "campus," as he calls it; that the idea is "imported from Germany and the Scandinavian countries." Has he not read of the "village green" in England—does he not know of the Boston Common?

Yes, they are "far from ideas accepted in America," for the most part as we built our towns and cities around courts and back alleys that afterward became the slums that most cities are now trying to eradicate; the places where children learned to hide a lot of badness, and that now are being in some cases turned into open playgrounds. The writer remembers when his parents decided to buy the court behind our house and two others to prevent any one from building "shanties" in it. The owners have now removed the fences from around it and it is a playground open on three sides.

The Chamber of Commerce of this city is to hold an open meeting in furtherance of the Federal Housing Corporation's plans in order to help people of limited means acquire a home, or be able to rent one that is not in the alley, whilst at the same time the National Chamber of Commerce is recently on record as being opposed to the Government aiding anybody, now that business is picking up in these lines.

The Post Impressionist

Oh Yeah, Okay?

Post Office, Friday.

ONE of England's foremost etymologists has played this Column a scurvy etymological trick and, in our opinion, dimmed half the romance of a popular phrase.

To Sir William Alexander Craigie, Kt., M. A. (St. Andrews and Oxon), LL. D. (St. Andrews), D. Litt. (Oxon Cantab., Calcutta, Michigan, Wisconsin), Honorary Fellow of Oriel, Joint-Editor of the great Oxford English Dictionary.

And we refer to "O.K."

For our part, we aren't sure that Sir William hasn't even placed himself in something perilously like contempt of a British court.

A while ago, an English appellate tribunal, deciding a commercial case, gave imperial-legal standing to "O.K." The learned judges recognized "O. K." as a binding phrase equivalent to—in fact, an allowable version of—"All Correct:" a sign of approval. And they ruled that the term was of pure American Indian origin.

This we, at the moment, duly recorded. More: we gave it the stamp of our approval.

All the while that the case was before the public, Sir William kept silence—so far as we can in any wise discover.

Anyhow, he certainly never communicated with us.

Yet now, after the whole thing should be beyond dispute, he has been quoted as saying that:

Whereas "whoopee" and "booze" are native to his own British Isles, and "O.K." to the United States, the last-named word-of-convenience had its Pallas-like birth not from the "untutored mind" of the poor savage in our vanished Far West, but in the equally vanished culture of Boston.

Boston resents this as a hard impeachment: Boston still cherishes the memory of her past fastidiousness! Small wonder that the cultured Boston Globe complains:

"The learned Englishman has gone far out on a limb."

Nor can we ourselves—though for other reasons—take it lying down.

Lexicographer Craigie can have "whoopee" for his fellow British subjects, as an exclamation. You'll find it thus in many an English book of the last century and the century-before-last—although the verb "to make whoopee" is, we maintain, one of the best of the many good verbs (not to mention nouns) midwived by the U. S. A.'s national Bathtub-Gin Decade.

As a verb, on the other hand, "booze" ("to booze, meaning to liquor-up") is more British than American. So is the adjective "boozy," implying alcoholic semi-saturation—although the noun "booze" or "boose' is a naturalized citizen of our own country, and although you can trace the root of these terms into at least five other tongues.

(The Post-Impressionist connected it with the Latin buza, from the Roman verb "to drink"—until he learned better. How about the Welsh bozi? There is a Russian buza, or millet-beer. The Old Dutch buyzen was closely connected with tippling. And the Copts, sole preservers of ancient Egyptian, have an ale called bouza, which, we are credibly informed, possesses remarkable authority.)

But, anyhow, when Sir William, unable to claim the useful word "O. K." for his own England, tries to give the credit for it to Boston—i. e., to the nearest thing to England within the U. S. A.—why, then we become as jealous of the Indians' rights as Boston becomes shocked by what it erroneously considers the term's vulgarity.

We thoroughly appreciate reasons which might deter our present President and similarly sensitive Jacksonians from accepting the first explanation of "O. K." advanced by the Century Dictionary: to-wit, that those letters were Old Hickory's abbreviation for "All Correct." On the other hand, we are sure not even Secretary Wallace would balk at the second suggestion: that "O. K." came to its present significance because Old Keokuk (1780-1848), the "Watchful Fox," Chief of the Sacs-and-Foxes, signed a lot of treaties with the paleface in his day—and always used his initials for his signature.

And, anyhow, there's one derivation which all Americans can agree on, from Massachusetts Bay to the Pacific, from the Canadian border to the Mexican. We can all agree on the hint of Webster's New International Dictionary:

"Prob. fr. Choctaw okeh, it is so and not otherwise."

Gallico Skis.

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Feb. 13.

THIS living human document may not amount to much if only because it is being composed in a slabsided Tower of Babel on a portable German typewriter.

It is widely reported in Europe that the German factories which produce the typewriters also manufacture machine guns, and there is a popular story of a stenographer who sat down to type some letters but hit the trigger instead of the space bar and blew her employer full of holes.

Two Japanese journalists sitting across the pine table from your correspondent at this writing, in danger of causing an international incident at this international demonstration of good will, is a mental hazard which tends to cramp a man's style. Up to this time, however, the German typewriter has not shelled anyone, so your correspondent is beginning to gain confidence. It may be only a simple typewriter, after all, or maybe it just isn't loaded.

The press room is a reminder of the one of the League of Nations at Geneva, for there are journalists here of many nations—including, of course, the Scandinavians—and most of them are not sportswriters by trade but heavy duty thinkers and political reporters from the regular bureaus of the world press sent to Garmisch from Berlin, Rome and Paris to cover a series of events which contain possibilities as grim and warlike as the deliberations of any conference of diplomats for the purpose of limiting armaments or concluding treaties of peace.

IT was a surprise, therefore, to find sitting down at the end of the pine table a few minutes ago Mr. Paul Gallico, a professional sportswriter from New York—an odd bird, among so many colleagues of more serious occupations, but stranger still because he is a sportswriter who often performs in the sport which he undertakes to cover.

Consistent with policy, Mr. Gallico recently took a course of instruction in skiing in an indoor school on a slide covered with epsom salts in lieu of snow, and when he arrived in Garmisch he selected the highest alp in the neighborhood and slipped downhill. He dashed through the air with the greatest of ease and landed in a river in the valley, and if there had been timers present he undoubtedly would have established a new world record, for his hop was more like a parachute leap without the parachute than a ski run.

Mr. Gallico's daring jump has been the subject of much admiring comment by the hardy Norsemen from the Scandinavian countries who are experts in this sport, but our hero has confessed to your correspondent that he did not mean to come down the mountain. In fact, Mr. Gallico fell off the alp and is one of the few men who have done this and survived.

He was standing at the top terrified by the view when his skis slipped and he dashed away. Skis are not equipped with brakes, and the American journalist, being unable to arrest his descent, spread his wings and took off into space.

• • • •

LIKE the humble South Bend, Ind., street car motorman who tapped a drunken passenger over the head with his control handle and knocked him cold, to discover that he had knocked out John L. Sullivan, Mr. Gallico is now in a rather delicate situation.

The unfortunate motorman was a quiet citizen afraid of strife who struck the bellicose stranger only in desperation, but now he was famous through South Bend, Ind., which contains many tough guys, and all the tough guys in South Bend began to look him up and swing punches at him so that they could have the honor of licking the man who knocked out John L. Sullivan. Soon he was forced to leave town and change his name, and that may be Mr. Gallico's fate here, because all the hardy Norsemen are issuing challenges to him to jump off higher and steeper alps.

Our hero, however, is standing on his one achievement and is cabling to Saks Fifth Avenue, the New York department store in which he studied skiing on Mount Epsom, the indoor alp, to demand his varsity letter.

His worst fear now is that the American coach will tap him on the shoulder and deliver the terrible news that he has made the team, all because he slipped off an alp.

The German typewriter is positively not a machine gun, after all, but a very ingenious mechanism, nevertheless.

Neutrality Retreat

Exporting Interests, Hyphenates And Isolationist Senators Stall Adoption Of Permanent Policy For Nation In Time Of War.

By Livingston Hartley.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE last three months have witnessed a general retreat by our Government on the whole neutrality front, culminating in the shelving of the Pittman-McReynolds bill, now abandoned by those whose name it bears. Nowhere has this retreat been more marked than in the issue of restricting American commercial relationships with belligerents. Subsequent events have proved that the early stand of the Administration on the war in Ethiopia was an advanced position which was difficult to maintain under the barrage of minority opposition.

The President began warning American citizens that "any of our people who voluntarily engage in transactions of any character with either of the belligerents do so at their own risk." This warning was followed by official statements that the larger interests of the American people were directly opposed to profiteering by a minority of exporters in "blood money," obtained by aiding belligerents to carry on war abroad. The policy these early warnings represented obtained Nation-wide support from the American people, and so did the attempts of the President to enforce it by exerting pressure on exporters of war materials to Italy and Ethiopia.

Then came the counter attack from the minorities whose interests were affected. Protests from export groups against any restriction of war trade with Italy were seconded by well-organized protests from Italo-Americans. Both of these groups began to prepare for a concentration of heavy artillery on Congress in order to further their own special interests at the expense of the American people as a whole.

The Administration soon fell back to a less exposed position. Its effort to bring about drastic restriction of American commercial assistance to belligerents was given up, and replaced by an attempt to limit such assistance to a normal amount of trade. This weaker policy was included in the permanent neutrality bill which the Administration sponsored.

• • • •

THEN Congress met, and the rolling barrage of the minority groups began to fall on the Senators and Congressmen most exposed to their fire. Soon the exporting interests and the Italian immigrants found valuable allies; their opposition was seconded by a small but influential group of isolationist Senators.

The motives of these Senators in advancing the cause of the war traders and the hyphenates are not easy to understand. It is true that the neutrality bill, by restricting American trade with all belligerents, would have limited American assistance to an aggressor and thereby aided the League of Nations indirectly to restore peace. It is possible, therefore, that the action of Senators Johnson and Borah was largely influenced by their old personal hostility to the League.

Having fought the League so bitterly 16 years ago, they may consider that their personal "face" requires them to oppose the League efforts to end war, regardless of the damage they might thereby inflict on the larger interests of the United States. In any case, rather than accept the policy of the Administration, these Senators prefer to expose the American people to the old struggle for the "Freedom of the Seas," which ended so tragically in 1917.

The retreat on neutrality has become almost a rout. Senator Pittman now states that the permanent neutrality bill will not be passed at this session, and that the temporary act of August 31 will be extended instead in slightly amended form. The crucial provision limiting commercial assistance to belligerents is expected to be "greatly modified and restricted" if continued at all.

Looking back on the four-month neutrality battle, the defeat of the Administration appears due to one primary cause. The entire neutrality problem is so complex that the American people are not able to understand it sufficiently to insist on the protection of their interests. The exporters, the alien groups and the isolationist Senators, on the other hand, know exactly what they want, and wield enough power in Congress to defeat the desires of unorganized millions of the public.

• • • •

NOW that the battle has been decided, it is important to see where we stand as a nation. We are now faced with two different problems, one immediate, and the other future. Our immediate problem is the war between Italy and Ethiopia, which can be solved by temporary measures.

Whatever action we take in this war, we will bring little danger to our neutrality. If our Government takes no further action, our exporters can render such decisive economic assistance to Italy that all pacific efforts of the League powers to restore peace will be nullified, as has already been indicated by the failure to adopt sanctions on oil. Since the President has been denied by Congress effective legal authority to restrict exports to the belligerents, it is difficult to see what action he can take to limit economic assistance to Italy.

Moral pressure alone has already been shown to be fruitless by the increase in our exports to that country in recent months. The solution would seem to lie in the adoption of a measure by Congress relating specifically to the present war, but would not tie our hands in the radically different conditions we may have to face in the future.

Our future neutrality policy is far more vital to our welfare, since it may have to function under conditions which will make our neutrality precarious. The failure of our present attempt to adopt a permanent policy makes it opportune to consider now a basic element in our neutrality needs for the future.

• • • •

THREATS to our neutrality will come from overseas. For this reason, our position towards war is vitally affected by seapower. Involvement in war on the side of the powers holding command of the sea would be costly, but war against the dominant seapowers would be destructive to our commerce and even dangerous to our security.

Our old historic policy of insisting on "neutral rights" to trade with belligerents, under the doctrine of the "Freedom of the Seas," was particularly dangerous in this respect. It led inevitably to friction with the powers holding command of the sea who were in a position to stop our ships or seize our goods, and were best able to hurt us if friction developed to its ultimate conclusion. The problem of our trade with belligerents during war remains to be solved, since the solution contained in the Administration's neutrality bill has been rejected by Congress.

Another solution, suggested by Mr. Baruch and others, seems particularly worthy of consideration now. This is the "cash-and-carry" proposal. It would require American exports destined for belligerents to be accepted and paid for in our ports, and shipped overseas as foreign property in foreign ships. Under this scheme the destruction of our exports at sea would cease to concern our Government.

From the legal point of view, the cash-and-carry policy would be 100 per cent neutral, since it would open our markets to any belligerent physically able to take delivery of our goods. The inability of one belligerent to enter our markets would not be our fault, but that of its enemies.

• • • •

THIS policy would cost us less economically than restriction of exports to normal quotas, since, in either case, the dominant sea-powers alone could purchase substantial amounts of American exports. Under the cash-and-carry policy their imports from us would only be limited by their capacity to purchase and ship our goods abroad.

Politically, this policy would have two most valuable results. It would not only eliminate a very dangerous field of friction with belligerents over our wartime trade, but would help to safeguard our larger national interests abroad. This latter result would not be apparent in a Russo-Japanese war, where geography would permit both belligerents to transport our goods across different oceans. It would, on the other hand, be very apparent in another great war in Europe.

The present danger in Europe is caused by the expansionist ambitions of the military dictatorships. Their enemies in another war would be the dominant sea-powers, democracies who seek both peace and stability and who have the controlling influence in the League of Nations. However committed we may be to isolation, some of our vital interests are closely aligned with those of the maritime democracies in Europe. Little imagination is required to picture the consequence to us of a German military triumph in Europe, decisive enough to shatter the power of the British Empire.

Our present security on the Atlantic would then disappear overnight, and with it the strategical relationships which have made isolation possible. We might even be forced to seek alliances in place of isolation, since a triumphant greater Germany and a militaristic Japan would find many reasons for a common attitude towards the Western Hemisphere.

From a hard-boiled nationalist standpoint, there is much to be said for a policy of 100 per cent neutrality which, during another war, would contribute substantial aid to the powers whose victory would safeguard our larger interests.

Old-Age Pension Act Is Effective in Texas

Austin, Tex., Feb. 13 (AP).—The Texas old-age pension law, providing for payments up to $15 monthly to persons over 65, became effective today.

Payments, to be derived from State Liquor taxes, are expected to start by July 1. Orville S. Carpenter, executive director of pensions, said he anticipated between 200,000 and 300,000 applications, but that only about 50,000 would be eligible.

Carpenter assigned three-fourths of the liquor-tax revenue to finance the program, but declined to estimate how much would be available.

Footnote To Life

By Karl Schriftgiesser

A Kipling Memento.

THIS is a footnote to the "Life of Rudyard Kipling." Some future biographer, seeking to rescue Kipling the man from the great mass of his own writings, may be able to make use of it. For it is just one of those little things so much more really valuable, in its way, than anything you may find in the staid obituaries, the critical dissertations, and the "Collected Works of the Poet of Empire" (and much more).

I came across it, of all places, in the House Office Building. It's not very often that you will find anything to do with literature in that labyrinth of statistics, oratory and back numbers of the Congressional Record. But here and there you sometimes come face to face with what you least expect to find, such as a footnote to the "Life of Rudyard Kipling."

Representative James W. Wadsworth, who represents the Thirty-ninth New York district and the class of '98, Yale, in all legislative matters here in Washington, pulled the footnote from his pocket the other day. This, he said, might be of interest. It was an unsigned "poem," obviously dashed off of a busy day, by some talented person. There was nothing great about it, as you will see.

• • • •

I ASKED the Gentleman from New York to elucidate. With that caution born of years of devotion to the public service, the genial squire of Geneseo, N. Y. urged me not to quote him, so you will have to bear with this prosaic account of how a Congressman happened to be going around with a poem by Kipling in his pocket.

It all began back in 1897, a year before Mr. Wadsworth was graduated from Yale. In college he was a great reader, as were some others of his class. Among their idols was a young Britisher from India, who was just becoming famous. He had already written "Soldiers Three," a great favorite with the sons of Eli.

This group included Gouverneur Morris, the novelist, Raymond M. Crosby, the artist, Frederick Kernochan, judge of New York's court of special session, and Julian S. Mason, who used to edit to "old" New York Post.

Impelled by their fascination for these stories of Indian life, this group, with others, formed a "Kipling Club." Nothing very serious, mind you. It's main purpose, Mr. Wadsworth recalls, was to hold a grand annual feast, with Kipling and his works as an excuse, and a few short speeches on his many works just to make it official.

This group had what Mr. Wadsworth laughingly calls today the "effrontery" to invite Kipling, then sojourning in New York, to attend the first dinner. While waiting for a reply, the boys planned a magnificent meal with all the trimmings both wet and dry, and Crosby made place-cards, with Tommy Atkinses and Indian Sikhs and such things all over them, in the true Kipling manner. They almost expected he might appear in New Haven.

• • • •

THE day before the dinner, however, they got a note from Kipling. Expecting a formal declination, they were pleased and surprised to find the rejection of the invitation in the following words:

Attend, ye lassies
Of swate Parnassus
And wipe me burnin' tears away.
For I'm declinin'
A chance of dinin'
With the boys of Yale on the 14th May.

The ladin' fature
Will be literature
For their light and leadin'
Are engaged in readin'
Me immortal works from dawn till night.

They've made a club there
And staked out grub there
With plates and napkins in joyous row,
And they'd think it splindid
If I attindid,
And so would I, but I cannot go.

The honest fact is
That daily practise
At bowlin' inkpots, the same as me,
Consumes me hours
In the muses' bowers

When you grow older
And skin your shoulder
You'll find your chances
As time advances,
For takin' a lark are as slim as mine.

But I'm digressin'
Accept me blessin'
And remimber what auld King Solomon said:
That youth is ructious
And whisky's fluctious
And there's nothin' sure but the mornin' 'ead!

AND that's the Wadsworth footnote to the "Life of Rudyard Kipling," given, I assure, in no hopes of adding to the Bard of India's poetic reputation, but merely to recall that he was, at one time, full of humor and good spirits, and, if he were afraid of a morning head in New Haven, he could find time to reject it graciously.

Boulder Dam Builders Beat Time Two Years

Secretary Ickes announced yesterday the Boulder Dam and power house would be accepted from the contractor on March 1, two years ahead of schedule.

Six Companies, Inc., the contractor, and the Bureau of Reclamation entered a final agreement on payments, penalties and settlement of claims prior to fixing the date for termination of the contract.

House Leaders Plan Neutrality Test on Monday

Will Rush Bill to Vote With Amendments Banned; Senate Sets Action.

House and Senate bills except in clarifying language.

It is my purpose to take it before the House on Monday under a suspension of rules. It is necessary to get this bill passed immediately, in substantially the same form as the Senate measure, if it is to become effective by the expiration of the present law on March 29.

"In adding the credit restriction to provisions of the present law, we have made a step in the right direction. Although some members would like to see certain commodities of war added to the existing embargo on arms, ammunition and implements of war, the credit section will to a great extent aid in solving this question."

Senators Confer With Nye.

On the other side of the Capitol, a dozen Senators met with Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, chairman of the Senate Munitions Committee, to discuss ways and means of obtaining more binding legislation. In the House, Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, was seeking to crystallize a similar movement, but Monday's rules suspension plan renders his task hopeless. In the Senate, the Nye group has but little more chance of success, for Administration leaders are bent on an early adjournment of Congress, and they believe any effort to broaden the neutrality resolution would result in a long, drawn-out controversy.

Co-operating with Nye in the Senate were Senators Clark, of Missouri; Pope, of Idaho; Donahey, of Ohio; Schwellenbach and Bone, of Washington; Holt, of West Virginia; Bulow, of South Dakota and Costigan, of Colorado (Democrats); Capper, of Kansas and Frazier of North Dakota (Republicans); LaFollette, of Wisconsin (Progressive) and Benson, of Minnesota (Farmer-Laborite). Nye also is counting on the support of Senators Norris, of Nebraska, and Vandenberg, of Michigan (Republicans).

Senator Nye admitted the group cannot afford to filibuster the proposed neutrality extension, for fear of killing it altogether, but said he believed they could force amendments.

Swanson Shows Improvement,' Physicians Say

'Resting Comfortably' Is Word at Hospital; Secretary Ill of Pleurisy.

"A slight improvement" was noted early last night by physicians attending Secretary of the Navy Swanson, who is seriously ill at the Naval Hospital.

Pleurisy has developed in the 74-year-old Virginian's left side following a fall in which he suffered a broken rib. Doctors added, however, that he was resting "comfortably."

The improvement reported last night followed an encouraging bulletin published at 11 a. m. yesterday when it was stated that "the Secretary is better now than at 6 o'clock this morning."

Visited by Stepson.

One member of the Secretary's immediate family, Douglas Hall, his stepson, visited him yesterday and reported that he seemed "fairly well."

"I am surprised at his remarkable constitution," Hall said. "He does not seem worried a bit."

Swanson entered the hospital February 5 suffering from a broken rib he received when he fell in the bathroom of his home, 2136 R street northwest. He appeared to be recovering rapidly from his injury when pleurisy developed.

Naval doctors attending him had not expected this turn from the injury which was inflicted ten days ago. They explained that if pleurisy develops it usually comes within a few days.

Capt. G. C. Thomas, commandant of the hospital, stated last night that there was no evidence of pneumonia at this time.

Acting Secretary Henry L. Roosevelt announced yesterday at a press conference that he believed the Secretary would be back within a very short time.

Secretary Swanson's illness is the second since he entered the Cabinet. In 1933 he was stricken with a serious cold and spent several weeks in the hospital recuperating.

Synagogue Site Purchase Marked

Purchase of property for construction of a new synagogue was celebrated last night at a rally of the Southeast Hebrew congregation.

The new place of worship is expected to be built within a year at a cost of approximately $30,000 at 417-19 Ninth street southeast. The congregation, organized in 1921, long ago outgrew its present quarters.

Rabbi J. T. Loeb, on behalf of the members, presented Max Simon, congregation president, with a medal in recognition of his leadership in the building drive.

Philip Cohen, a trustee; Max Goldberg, congregation vice president, and Mrs. Leon Rassin, first vice president of the ladies' auxiliary, also spoke.

Other officers of the congregation and of the ladies' auxiliary, all active in the campaign for the structure, included Samuel Saidman, Samuel Deskin, M. M. Katzin, Edward Torchin, Mrs. Nathan Farnoroff, Mrs. Morris Radis, Mrs. William Siff and Mrs. Albert M. Baker.

Bankruptcy Act Clause Is Held Illegal in Ohio

Tennessee Publishing Firm Denied Reorganization Plea by Court.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Feb. 13.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed today a lower court decision holding unconstitutional a sub-section of the bankruptcy act and rejecting an application of the Tennessee Publishing Co. for reorganization under section 77-B of that act.

The decision, which included an admission by the appellate court that it was unable to understand all phases of the reorganization plan, resulted in temporary continuance of a Federal receivership of the Tennessee Publishing Co., former publishers of the Nashville Tennessean and the Evening Tennessean.

The company was controlled by Col. Luke Lea until establishment in 1933 of the receivership.

Attaches of the court declined to comment on the import of the ruling against Sub-section B-5, but a bankruptcy law expert in Washington said there that "if the decision was sweeping, it might destroy the usefulness of the law entirely."

If sub-section B-5 is thrown out entirely," he said, "most business men would probably prefer to seek reorganization under the old equity procedure, instead of under the new law."

The appellate decision said in part:

"We confine ourselves to provisions of sub-section B-5, which outlines a method of adjustment of claims of nonassenting creditors."

Sub-section B-5 lists three specific means of satisfying creditors who refuse to join in reorganization plans of a bankrupt business and gives a fourth, saying in effect, "or by such means as the judge may think equitable and fair under the circumstances."

Washington lawyers said the effect of the decision depended on whether all four methods were held invalid. The appellate judges here declined to comment.

Judges Florence E. Allen, Charles H. Moorman and C. C. Simons asserted there was "no occasion for comment" on the general scope and application of the bankruptcy act as a whole, and said invalidity of the sub-section, B-5, left the rest of the act "an operable statute."

Sub-section B-5 requires that two-thirds of the creditors consent to the reorganization plan and it was because that number failed to assent to the publishing company's plan, that the appellate court upheld United States District Judge John J. Gore, of Nashville, in dismissing the company's petition for reorganization.

The Blizzard Talkers.

"Boy, that was a winter! I remember the snow was . . . "

"What winter?"

"The winter of 1888. The snow was . . . "

"Oh, that one! We don't have mild winters like '88 any more."

"Mild! Say, didn't you ever hear of the famous blizzard of '88?"

"It seems to me I'm always hearing of it. Why do you keep dragging it up?"

"Lissen, it began snowing in the evening of March the . . . "

"This year it began snowing in December and it has never stopped."

"There were drifts so high on the second day that . . . "

"Don't talk like a sissy. This winter we don't even start measuring a snowfall until the fourth or fifth day."

"What a storm! It snowed all night and all the next day and all . . . "

"A mere flurry!"

"I remember there was a horse car stalled in Main street with snow over its roof. It stayed there for three days."

"There are autos stalled in snowdrifts in this city right now that have been there since Christmas. I know of a case where a taxi driver got a new cab and the company took a snowdrift in trade, knowing there would be a second-hand cab in it when melted down."

"Why, in '88, my man, the snow reached up to the second story windows of the old Grand Union in New York."

"That's nothing. We've had a half dozen snowfalls this winter that reached up to the third verse of 'The Music Goes 'Round and Around'."

"And it came out here?"

"No, it couldn't come out anywhere on account of all the exits being blocked with ice."

"Lissen, back in 1888 traffic didn't get back to normal for one week, two days and 19 hours."

"Yeah? Well, this winter a new storm comes along and buries the previous statistics on normality so deep nobody can dig 'em up."

"In the blizzard of '88 the fire engines couldn't get to fires."

"This year they don't even try it. All fires were notified six weeks ago that they would have to wait."

"We were two weeks removing the snow from the city streets and . . . "

"Two weeks! Phooey! Today we don't even recognize snow until it has established a permanent residence. It takes six weeks to do this."

"I remember the entire city was covered 10 feet deep with a pure white blanket . . . "

"White!"

"White snow?"

"Yes sir."

Post Carriers Banquet Guests In Annual Fete

'Big Feed' and Entertainment at Willard Finds Boys 'Rarin' to Go.'

With a brass band blaring forth military tunes and Washington's leading entertainers "doing their stuff," more than 300 Washington Post carrier boys dined "out loud" last night—cheering, whistling and rattling their noisemakers—at the annual Post carrier boy banquet in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel.

Not a newspaper was in sight and, considering the orderly way in which the neatly dressed boys, their hair slicked back, filed into their places around the horseshoe-arranged tables, they might have been mistaken for a group of bank messengers.

Boys Enjoy "Spread."

But the big, brass band, Loew's Fox unit, soon fixed that. Their playing wasn't fancy, but the drummer had a "booming" foot, the cornetists and saxophonists, strong lungs and the girls with the cymbals, shapely but powerful arms.

Whatever source of shyness that persisted among the boys vanished completely when the waiters appeared with the food. Thereafter, one group lost all interest in the extra-dinner table proceedings, concentrating on the job at hand—putting away a delicious chicken dinner with all the traditional soup-to-nuts side dishes.

Tempting as the food was, it required a hearty appetite to concentrate solely on the "eatin's," for between the courses the best that Washington offers in the form of stage talen paraded on and off the little stage in the center of the room. George M. Cohan arrived with the fruit cup to recite a poem he wrote when he was 12, and Ricardo Cortez, moion picture star, came with the ice cream.

So impressed were some boys by the skit Cortez put on with his assistant, Nick Copeland, that there was considerable melted cream on their plates when he left.

There were entertainers of every variety, including banjo players, a hill-billy band, dancers, singers, acrobats, comedians, card tricksters, a harmonica player, magicians and Bozo, the winder dog.

Entertainers at Affair.

Those who did their act while "soup was on" were John Burke, Ken Harvey and Ruthie Barnes, all at the Fox Theater, and those tots, Wayne and Herrill Holt and Helen Robinson. "Chicken" entertainers were the Three Nonchalants and Bert Granoff, introduced by Audrey Sieber, mistres sof ceremonies at the Eearle Theater; Mel Christopher, magician, and "Mr. Michael," the accordeon player at the Mayfair Restaurant.

After-dinner fun was furnished by Arch McDonald, Harry Baker, general manager of the Wilson Steamship Line; card tricks, Bill Biven's string band, Art Brown and John Adams, radio entertainers; Rennie Reynolds, Lotus Restaurant dancer; Don Rice, master of ceremonies of La Parde, and Tito Guizar, radio singer.

As a climax to the banquet, more than 50 prizes, ranging from sweaters and trench coats to footballs and wrist watches, were distributed to boys holding lucky seat numbers.

Mexican Catholics Appeal for Prayers

Mexico City, Feb. 13 (AP).—The Mexican Catholic episcopate, in a letter sent today to the episcopates of the United States, England, Spain and many other countries, appealed to Catholics outside of Mexico to pray for relief of their "brothers in Mexico who are living in a terrible and anguished situation."

The letter, signed by all archbishops and bishops — including Mgr. Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, papal delegate living in exile in the United States — carefully avoided any suggestion of a wish for foreign intervention.

Colored Boys AreEntertained At Fete by Post

Youngsters Scramble for Louis' Telegram; Prizes Awarded.

Members of The Post editorial, promotion and circulation staffs joined in a banquet and celebration last night with nearly 100 colored boys at Anderson's Spanish Villa.

Joe Louis, the heavyweight championship contender, wired his regrets at not being able to attend. The wire from Detroit caused a stampede for its possession, Ernest Williams securing it on an award which followed. Joe, a former newsboy, said:

"Bill McCormick:

"Sorry I can't attend banquet for newsboys. I want to extend my hearty congratulatons to the fellows, also to say that continuous hard work will send them to the top. JOE LOUIS."

Rudolph Craig, barytone, with the "Dinner for One" number, led off the entertainment, which went into an impromptu truckin' and trailin' contest when Gertie Wells, pianist, started that Harlem number. From the carriers, "Sugarfoot" Talmadge Moore, William Charlton, "Streamliner" Ernest Williams and James Dowd, vied with Edith Proctor and Viola Holloway, entertainers, coming off second best. Charlton claimed a Proctor-Holloway dance and the others cut in.

A menu, fruit cocktail, consomme, roast turkey with cranberry sauce, sweet potatoes, peas, cream, cake and orange juice, was annihilated amid generous hilarity. Then came the prizes. The winners follow:

Taking of photographs were delayed until coins had been tossed to decide who should stand opposite the entertaining trio. Ernest Willians, winer of four prizes, proved lucky again.

When announcement was made of the more than 100 per cent jump in Post city home delivery circulation during the ownership of Eugene Meyer, some one started that "heart-of-a-whale" song, "Minnie, the Moocher," a lusty chorus chimed in with "Hei-de-Ho." Of course, the "Music, Round and Round" followed, and other victory numbers until the prize alarm clock sounded and it was time for the early birds to be off to roost.

Among those in attendance were Charles C. Boysen, assistant comptroller and treasurer; R. L. Hobart, of the national advertising department; John Riseling, city editor; Bill McCormick, boxing expert; Raoul Blumberg, circulation promotion staff; E. S. Anderson, city circulation promotion; E. H. Lawson, various route men, and the carriers.

College Women Assail 'Rider' On Radicals

'Defeats Own Ends,' Says President of A.A.U.W. Branch Here.

The Washington branch of the American Association of University Women yesterday joined the concerted demand by civic organizations for repeal or modification of the anti-Red "rider" to the District appropriations act.

In a letter to Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, who has promised to call up the Sisson bill at the next committee meeting, and ask that it be reported for action in the House on the next District day, February 24, Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, president of the association, said:

"The Washington branch of the American Association of University Women earnestly petitions you to use your power and influence for protection of the public schools of the District of Columbia.

"We believe that the so-called 'anti-communism rider' on the District appropriations act defeats its own end by seeming to fear that an honest, well-informed study of the Russian government might make American children less loyal to their own.

"Further than this, we are convinced that when public school teachers are intimidated by such a prohibition as this 'rider,' the real sufferers are the children themselves. Schools that are subjected to repression of this kind can not provide either sound instruction or those ideals of integrity and independence which ought to be our children's birthright as American citizens."

House Receives $70,000,000 Air Corps Bill

Forces of Administration Block Moves to Cut Record Total.

By the United Press.

A bill proposing the expenditure of $70,000,000 to give the Army an Air Corps "second to none" was introduced in the House yesterday soon after Administration forces had crushed attempts by a fighting band of rebels to reduce the unprecedented peacetime War Department appropriation bill.

Struggling to keep the measure's total appropriation within limits fixed by President Roosevelt, Democratic leaders whipped party members into line to defeat an amendment by Representative William Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, which would have swelled the military budget by another $13,000,000. Rogers sought to authorize purchases of 700 new Army planes instead of 565 called for in the bill.

Vote of 63 to 26.

The vote was 63 to 26. Before it was taken, Chairman John J. McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Military Affairs Committee, introduced his "second to none" Air Corps bill. It calls for construction at 800 planes annually until the Army air planes number 4,000 instead of 1,800, as at present.

McSwain warned that the Nation's first line of defense is in the air and predicted this would be the area in which the first decisive clash of hostile forces would occur in the next war.

The first test votes on the appropriation bill came on amendments by two members of the newly formed economy bloc to chip about $23,000,000 from Army pay grants. One proposal fell before a roar of "noes." The other was smothered, 73 to 9. The overwhelming defeat of both amendments clearly indicated the temper of the House is to increase the size of the military budget—not to reduce it.

The pending bill again served yesterday as a vehicle for acrimonious debate on many extraneous subjects. It brought Representative Vito Marcantonio (Republican), New York, to his feet crying out against a strange definition of "Democracy" carried in the Army's training manual from 1928 to 1932 and removed on order of Secretary of War George Dern. The definition:

"Democracy: A government of the masses. Authority derived through mass meetings or any other form of direct expression. Results in mobocracy. Attitude toward property is communistic — negating property rights. Attitude toward law is that the will of the majority shall regulate, whether it be based upon deliberations or governed by passion, prejudice and impulse, without restraint or regard for consequences. Results in demagogism, license, agitation, discontent, anarchy."

Marcantonio pointed out that copies of the manual went to young national guardsmen and shouted:

Mob Attacks Described.

"Is this the kind of literature our young people should have?"

The little, dark-haired New Yorker then quoted passages from the new Army manual, which describe in detail how tanks could be used against mobs and instruct soldiers on the use of rifles against unruly gatherings.

Representative John W. McCormick (Democrat), Massachusetts, replied sharply that Federal troops rarely were used in breaking strikes or governing mobs unless it was to protect the movement of the mails.

"The Army has the right to maintain reasonable order in the country," he roared.

The first flurry came when Representative Thomas Blanton (Democrat), Texas, arose to defend Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, commander of the Eighth Corps Area, whose statement before the House Appropriations Committee that WPA expenditures were "stage money" has been widely publicized. Blanton said Hagood had been invited to speak frankly and he did.

The Texan also read a letter from a constituent complaining of waste of taxpayers' money by some New Deal bureaus. He pledged his loyalty to President Roosevelt, but said it was inevitable that the Chief Executive could not know all that Government underlings were doing.

"The waste of taxpayers' money must stop," he shouted.

Republicans grinned. Representative Tilman Parks (Democrat), Arkansas, chairman of the appropriations sub-committee in charge of the bill, demanded that members debate it and not politics. He turned savagely upon Blanton and cried out:

"The speech by the gentleman from Texas will be broadcast by the Liberty League and the Republicans and will cost the gentleman in the White House thousands of votes."

ured in several clashes with the Pennsylvanian over District budgets.

It was learned that when Ditter left Washington for Philadelphia late Wednesday it was with the intention of returning late last night or early today. His office tried yesterday, but in vain, to notify him in time of the special night meeting.

More Night Sessions Planned.

"We are going to hold night sessions right along, if necessary, the better to give the District all it needs and to promote early adjournment of Congress," said Blanton.

Meanwhile, as many colleagues in the House and Senate were rallying to support of the city's desperate battle for adequate health appropriations, which are slashed to the bone in the 1937 supply bill transmitted to Congress by the Bureau of the Budget, the Board of Public Welfare made the following announcement:

All previous records for bed occupancy at Gallinger Hospital were broken in January, with a daily average of 915 and a maximum census of 956 on the highest single day. At no time during the month, said Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock's report, were there less than 854 patients in the hospital.

Shortage of both personnel and space is more serious at Gallinger than in any other institution under jurisdiction of the District government.

Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Representatives Dirksen, Reed, Mapes and Focht, were among the members who stressed the granting of sufficient funds to operate efficiently the Capital's municipal hospitals and Health Department.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, of the District and Appropriations Committee, previously had expressed sympathy with plans for the mass meeting, and reiterated his intention of pressing the appropriations issue on Capitol Hill.

In his letter to Dr. Ruffin Blanton said:

Spent Several Weeks.

"After the President presented to Congress his budget, reducing certain amounts requested by the Health Department, and until you took the matter over into your own hands, I had spent several weeks, very sympathetically, in checking up the various reductions, in holding conferences with persons and representatives of associations interested, in an effort, if possible, to find the needed money, without any increased burden of taxation on the Washington people.

"I learned from the newspapers that you and your medical associates here have taken the matter out of the hands of our committee, and that you and a mass meeting next Sunday are to provide the needed funds.

"I feel that out committee owes you a debt of gratitude for taking this burden off of our shoulders. I sincerely hope that you and your mass meeting will be able to provide all needed funds. Your taking over this matter, before our committee had even reached it for consideration, and handling it yourself through a mass meeting, will enable our committee to devote its time to the other many problems."

Ramsey Replies to Blanton.

Dr. H. P. Ramsey, press spokesman of the District Medical Society, which decided to sponsor a mass meeting as a "last resort," in its strenuous campaign for further health funds, made the following reply:

"Apparently Mr. Blanton continues under a misapprehension as to the purpose of the mass meeting. We are now preparing resolutions to be presented to the meeting, which, if adopted, will have the effect of requesting the Commissioners to prepare supplementary estimates, bringing the health appropriations up to at least the amount originally requested of the Bureau of the Budget.

"Any other understanding of the purpose of the meeting is a misconception. I am sure Mr. Blanton will become aware of this when the meeting is held, if not sooner."

Representative Dirksen, ranking Republican on the House District Committee, interpreted the mass meeting simply as a manifestation of the constitutional right of free Asembly.

"Such a mass meeting," he said, "carries out our American tradition of free and open discusion of problems of public interest."

Representatives Palmisano, vice chairman of the House District Committee; Reed, Wood, Mapes and others, united in characterizing the mass meeting as a worthy expedient, and declared their sympathy with the campaign to secure enough money for the Health Department and hospitalization activities of the Board of Public Welfare.

The District Dental Society and the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians yesterday added their support to mass meeting arrangements.

Dental Group's Statement.

The dental group issued the following statement:

"The District of Columbia Dental Society, through its executive committee, has voted full indorsement and approval to the current campaign to procure adequate funds for proper health care in the District, and joins with the District of Columbia Medical Society and other local bodies in protesting the contemplated cut in appropriations.

"Dr. Donald H. Glew, chairman of the District of Columbia Dental Society committee on legislation, has issued this joint statement: 'The protection of the public health is of primary importance to individual and community welfare and any sum of money necessary to do this is well spent and the value derived is immeasurable. The health standards of the community can not be raised or even maintained if the already inadequate appropriations are reduced. The dental service in the public schools is only one of the health agencies which will be handicapped if the planned fund curtailment goes into effect.'"

Dr. Stephen C. Hopkins, president of the dental society, announced the appointment of the following members to attend Sunday's mass meeting in a unit to protest the cut:

Drs. George Albert Smith, W. M. Simkins, George F. Kane, Harold B. Hertford, Charles Basseches, John P. Burke, William Chase, W. Marion Falls, Charles L. Smith, Harry M. Spillan and Drs. Hopkins and Glew.

Divulging further plans for the citizens' meeting, the District Medical Society yesterday announced music will be furnished by Leon Brusiloff's orchestra, and 24 nurses, students and graduates, will serve as ushers. Attired in regulation uniform, they will come from the Instructive Visiting Nurses Society and the following hospitals: George Washington, Columbia, Emergency, Georgetown, Providence, Homeopathic and Sibley.

Coalition Proposal Scored

berg's proposal for a breaking of party lines arose from his speech in New York Wednesday night, in which he invited "Jeffersonian Democrats to join against Roosevelt, both during the campaign and "in the council chamber after next November's victory is won."

Representative Snell told newsmen yesterday he was "absolutely opposed to any coalition government."

"This is a two-party system," he said. "If the Democrats win let them run it. And if we win, we're going to run it."

From a Southern Democrat, Senator Black, of Alabama, came this comment on Vandenberg's speech:

"It is very interesting that the writer of the entertaining book on Alexander Hamilton should suddenly welcome co-operation of Jeffersonians. The philosophy of Hamilton has had no stronger defender in the United States than Senator Vandenberg. He cannot be both a Jeffersonian and a Hamiltonian.

"I'm wondering whether or not he has abandoned Hamilton."

Speaker Byrns said the "answer" to Vandenberg's proposal was "that the Democrats arent going to lose," while Representative Boland, of Pennsylvania, Democratic whip, remarked:

"If we're licked, we can take it. I don't think we are going to be licked, but we are used to taking it, and we'll come back for more. We'll wait and save the country again, if necessary."

The filing of President Roosevelt's name in Illinois followed by but a day the entrance of Senator Borah, of Idaho, and Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, into the Illinois Republican primary.

In Greensboro, N. C., Senator Dickinson, Republican keynoter in 1932, said he was an aspirant for the Presidential nomination, but would not seek pledged delegates.

On the Democratic side, there was talk of entering Roosevelt delegates in other States besides Illinois. Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and New Jersey were mentioned.

There also were suggestions that Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, majority floor leader, may be selected as keynoter at the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia June 23.

G. O. P. Chairman Fletcher, meanwhile, told reporters his committee had about $200,000 and planned a "pay-as-you-go" campaign.

Hoover to Continue Fight.

Portland, Oreg., Feb. 13 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover said today he would continue an active campaign against the New Deal as long as it continues to exist.

"As I live, I shall continue fighting the New Deal as long as it exists," he asserted at a press conference.

Asked if he would continue his active campaign regarless of who wins the Republican Presidential nomination, he replied:

"Why go into that now? We have a big battle to keep the issues before the people until the primary. The country is facing the most critical situation in 70 years."

Clipper Ship Seeks China Port

China, recently brought under Japanese dominance. Eventually, it is believed, the Japanese hope to continue the line to Shanghai.

Macau Already Has Airport.

Postoffice and airline officials, however, are confident that Japanese objections to the Manila-China link can be smoothed out "within a month." Whatever the outcome of these diplomatic efforts to pour oil on troubled Oriental waters, Pan-American, it was stated, would go through with its plans to link the Philippines and China.

A concession already has been secured from the Portguese government to use the Portguese colony of Macau, roughly 35 miles across the bay from Hongkong, as a landing spot. By using the Portuguese islands, it was pointed out, the Chinese government would be spared the embarrassment of being forced to make a decision in the face of possible pressure from other powers.

Macau, hardly 11 square miles in area, already has an airport although it is one which would require considerable development for use as the Pan-American Pacific terminal. An emergency landing field would also be available at the neighboring Portuguese island of Taipa.

Planes would be landed on either of these Portuguese islands and passengers and air mail would be ferried across Tyshan Bay to Hongkong, about three hours away. Although only a minor commercial port, Macau has a fine new artificial deep-water harbor that was completed in 1926 after three years of construction and a cost of $10,000,000. Vessels drawing 22 feet of water can enter the harbor with safety.

International air rivalries in the Orient have been growing steadily in recent years. The Japanese reply to the successful flight of the China Clipper was the drafting by the air ministry of an ambitious ten-year plan for the development of civil aviation calling for an expenditure of 230,000,000 yen by 1946.

The program, which still awaits approval, calls for the training of 1,400 pilots, building of air fields development of domestic and international air lines, the establishment of an institute for aeronautical research and the promotion of air-mindedness on the part of the public.

Housing Program Adopted

The Resettlement Administration, which has been building suburban housing, agricultural communities, and completing subsistence homestead projects.

These three organizations, it is believed, will undertake few, if any, new activities.

President Roosevelt has indicated that Congressional authorizations to lending agencies will be slashed. This would probably affect the RFC lending for housing, even if there should be a further demand for such loans.

The HOLC already has stopped receiving applications from home owners and its borrowing authorization is expected to be reduced by $1,000,000,000. It will become virtually a liquidating agency, plus an agency to manage real estate acquired in mortgage foreclosures.

The funds of the Resettlement Administration may e considerably reduced by transfer to the Works Progress Administration.

The new plan to be covered by the Wagner bill is the first semblance of a co-ordinated housing program under the New Deal. While housing has been one of the chief concerns of the Administration, it has been allowed to grow up all over the Government with schemes based on as many theories as there are agencies involved.

Secretary Ickes has proceeded on the theory that slum areas should be cleaned out and the buildings replaced with modern structures. At present his housing division has under way 48 such projects, to cost $130,000,000. The program calls for 50 structures, but in Louisville, Ky., it has been blocked by court injunction and in Washington only the land has been obtained.

Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, head of the Resettlement Administration, is proceeding on the theory that the way to solve the problem is to build houses in the suburbs and move workers to them. He is building four such communities.

The Federal Housing Administration insists that the solution lies in the encouragement of private building.

The RFC and the HOLC are strictly financial institutions.

All of these organizations have been working more or less at cross purposes. The situation has developed numerous controversies. Some time ago President Roosevelt appointed a committee composed of representatives of the various housing agencies for the purpose of attempting co-ordination. The proposed program is at least partially the result of this committee's work.

'Arm Now,' Plea Of Gen. Craig In Radio Talk

Army Chief Warns of War Danger, Advocates Preparedness.

By the United Press.

If the United States would learn from the repeated lessons of the past, it would give full support for an adequate national defense, Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff, told a Nation-wide radio audience last night.

Speaking in connection with national defense week, Craig said the "travails of Washington and Lincoln" should have taught the Nation something in the value of preparedness. He drew a pessimistic picture of world conditions and the outlook for peace.

"There is nothing in the present international situation," he said, "to indicate that the world will lay down its arms and embrace perpetual peace.

Says Others Arming.

"Many countries are now taking immediate steps toward increasing materially their land, air and sea forces. While we feel that we are more secure than some other nations we cannot look with indifference on events that cause prudent statesmen grave concern.

"It is well at this time when our relations with all countries are extremely friendly and when any strengthening of our forces cannot be taken amiss to examine with some care our readiness for defense."

Craig said both the Revolutionary War and the Civil War had lasted much longer than would have been necessary had Washington and Lincoln possessed a well-trained army to put into the field when the war broke out.

"When war may come we know not," he continued. "At times the road to war may be plainly marked with signposts that are easily read. The sequence of events may be such as to point the way with unmistakable clarity. Again war may strike with the sudden violence of a tropical hurricane. Prudence dictates that we be ready to guard against any storm irrespective of where it may brew."

Well Trained Nucleus.

He asked for "a small, but highly efficient regular Army. Well-equipped, wel-organized and susceptible of rapid expansion. We need a strong and efficient National Guard. We especially need a corps of upstanding reserve officers capable of training and leading our young men in event we are called upon to defend our country.

"Such an army we want, not to wage war, but to preserve peace. Under our system of government with the military always under civilian authorities, with the momentous decision of peace or war always left to the elected representatives of the people, the danger that our Army may precipitate a conflict is too remote for consideration."

Indian Chief Freed In Girl's Drowning

King William Courthouse, Va., Feb. 13 (AP).—Chief Paul Miles, of the Pamunkey Indians, today was acquitted in King William County Circuit Court of manslaughter charges in connection with the drowning of Doris Virginia Melton, Richmond schoolgirl.

The jury, in the Indian's second trial, returned its verdict after 45 minutes of deliberation. The first trial resulted in a hung jury.

Miss Melton was drowned in the Pamunkey River last July 4, while rowing with Chief Miles and two girl companions. The defense contended that the girl jumped into the stream of her own volition, while the prosecution claimed she was pushed from the boat by the Indian.

Data on PWA Suits Is Asked by Senate

By the Associated Press.

The Senate voted yesterday to ask a report of the Public Works Administration of the number of its public utility projects, both gas and electric, held up by injunction, and a general report on the status of this phase of the New Deal.

The resolution adopted was introduced by Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, advocate of the electrification program. It was passed without opposition in only a minute or two after it was introduced.

Norris told newsmen that he wanted to present the Senate with information it would need before acting on possible appropriation bills for completing projects already undertaken.

Meanwhile Secretary Ickes released PWA funds to pay for existing contracts on three Nebraska power projects as a result of settlement of recent suits brought in the District of Columbia Supreme Court. The projects are Columbus, Platte and Tricounty.

He said fees asked for legal services in connection with Nebraska projects by Arthur Mullen, former Democratic national committeeman, which have been held up several months, would not be paid until all legal questions involving the allotments were settled.

U. S. Is Warned Of World Race For Air Trade

Sees American Leadership Menaced; Combine Against Us Hinted.

By the Associated Press.

Warning of an impending international race for control of air trade routes was issued yesterday by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

The committee, one of the principal aeronautical research organizations of the country, also declared in its annual report to President Roosevelt that the pre-eminent place held by the United States in scientific aircraft development was being seriously threatened by many other nations.

The report was published almost coincidentally with word from Europe suggesting a combination of nations to compete against United States transatlantic airlines. In Paris on Wednesday Marcel Deat, air minister, told the Chamber of Deputies he favored an agreement among France, Germany and England.

Under contemplated plans, discussed at preliminary conferences here with representatives of private airlines of those three countries, the United States would carry at least half of the postal freight, with the balance divided among the three foreign lines.

"The foundations are being laid now for a world-wide struggle for the control of trade routes of the air, and for the control of world aeronautical markets," the committee's report said.

"It is becoming generally recognized that, other things being equal, a decisive advantage is this struggle will be with that country that has the greatest vision and initiative in establishing research facilities, and in executing long-range research programs."

The United States has led in aeronautics, largely because of the emphasis placed on fundamental scientific research, much of which has been done at the committee's laboratory at Langley Field, Va., the report said.

Norman Thomas Picket Hearing Is Postponed

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 13 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, appeared today before a magistrate on disorderly conduct charges resulting from his leadership of a parade of strike sympathizers in front of a Brooklyn department store.

Over Thomas' protest, the case was adjourned to March 23, and he was released on his own recognizance. He had furnished $500 bail after being arrested yesterday.

Money Interests Emerge From Obscurity as the Drama Resumes Old Prosperity

'Angels' Eager To Risk Chance Of a Stage Hit

Movie Money Is Important; Opera in the Outdoors; Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

One of the eloquent auguries of the renaissance of the living theater is to be detected in the sudden emergence of money from hiding.

Backers of shows are getting to be as numerous as they were back in the old days when almost any theatrical property made a profit, if not on Broadway, then out on "the road." There is not much of "the road" left, but "angels" are stumbling over each other on Broadway.

One of the surprising aspects of this situation is that the once hated rival of the so-called "legitimate" theater, the motion picture interests, are putting up money by the ton to produce plays, musical comedies and revues that give promise of eventuating into valuable screen subjects.

It is pointed out by one of the Associated Press' acute observers that this business of backing stage productions is often an expensive pastime. "Jubilee" and "Jumbo," the alliterative musical hits concurrently running on Broadway, cost in excess of $200,000 each.

That is quite a gamble. Of course, if the thing clicks—as both of these have—it turns out to be a gambol!

The current crop of show-backers comes from three sources—Wall street, society's upper crust and the film industry.

Cinema Has the Edge.

The motion picture industry has a two-edged sword with which to attack this problem of the box-office. If the plays it backs make money, that is almost infallible assurance that a remake of the production celluloid form will repeat the success and pile up additional velvet. Paramount has just proved this in the case of "Anything Goes."

"Jubilee," the Sam H. Harris hit, in so far as the cinema is concerned, is the property of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Warner Bros., having had a few failures sandwiched in between, own the current smash comedy hit, "Boy Meets Girl," and last season's holdover riot, "Three Men on a Horse."

Five-and-Ten Millions.

Still another with a penchant for the playhouse, to drop into a cheap vernacular, is Jimmy Donahue, man-about-town, representative of the Woolworth millions. Young Mr. Donahue, it is reported, will shoulder the entire production cost of "The Felix Ferry Revue," an extravagant musical, in which Lupe Velez, Dixie Dunbar and Hal Le Roy will be co-featured. The gentleman, at least, is starting out with three talented and vivid personalities.

Although few knew it, it was Franchot Tone, who went on from the Guild and the Group Theater productions to Hollywood glory and Joan Crawford, who put up the money for the Group Theater's "Awake and Sing" last year. It is said that he has other similar Group ventures in contemplation.

Leslie Howard, to be seen on the screen today in the film version of Robert Emmett Sherwood's "The Petrified Forest," is another who does not hesitate to invest his own cash—especially in productions in which he is to play the stellar role. He was one of the co-backers of the stage production of the Sherwood play when it was originally produced.

Someone has remarked that on Broadway, where everybody's motto is "take a chance," backing plays is not unlike betting on a horse at the track. If he comes in, you are a big shot. If he loses you tear up your ticket and start over again.

That is, if you and your bankroll have not been cured in the process!

Speaking of Leslie Howard, it is Charlotte Nicholas, one of his most ardent admirers and most belligerent defenders, who attacks this defenseless desk with contumely and scorn for having remarked in a moment of inadvertence that Bette Davis and Mr. Howard were cast together in "The Animal Kingdom." She is perfectly right. Of course, they were not. The leading women in "The Animal Kingdom," as everyone knows, were Myrna Loy and Ann Harding, the latter now on view at RKO-Keith's, with Herbert Marshall, in "The Lady Consents." It was in W. Somerset Maugham's "Of Human Bondage" that Bette Davis acquitted herself with such glory opposite Mr. Howard that she almost won the Academy award for the best feminine acting of the year.

It was, as a matter of fact, the story and action of "Of Human Bondage" I had in mind when I made the allusion that so aroused the ire of Mr. Howard's so-stanch advocate. Why I should have called it "The Animal Kingdom," I shall never know, and so you probably never will know, either.

Opera Al Fresco.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the eminently successful stage operetta, "Rose Marie" is performing for the musical cinema the same service that "In Old Arizona" executed for the talking screen when it was practically in its infancy, to coin a smart phrase.

"In Old Arizona," that sturdy O. Henry tale of the Cisco Kid, starring Warner Baxter and Dorothy Burgess, was the first of the audible features that had the temerity to take its microphones out into the open and record a full-length drama in its proper natural settings.

For the first time, to the best of my knowledge and belief, "Rose Marie" does the same thing for a singing subject.

Most of the musical films that have been released up to the present have been what might be designated "hot-house" products, carefully nurtured on sound-proof stages within the walls of the major Hollywood studios. "Rose Marie" went up into the High Sierras and unfolded its colorful story in natural environs such as the script and the intent of the authors must originally have had in mind.

End Justifies Means.

It is a matter of some personal doubt that Nelson Eddy and Jeannette MacDonald, who co-starred so handsomely also in the same company's film version of Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta," actually sang the famous numbers in the "Rose Marie" score while barging down turbulent streams in fragile canoes or strolling the dim trails of obscure mountain fastnesses. I suspect that the action was filmed there and the vocalism subsequently "dubbed in" in the quiet recesses of one of those sound-proof stages.

However, there are times when the end more than justifies the means and this seems to be one of them.

If "Rose Marie" is the outstanding success it must be from all reports—and we shall know definitely today—there would seem to be no reason why an outdoor filming of Puccini's opera of "The Girl of the Golden West," based on the Belasco stage play that starred Blanche Bates and Frank Keenan, might not be accomplished with equal distinction.

Grand opera must inevitably come to the screen, sooner or later, and that would seem to be an admirable point at which to start.

Cab Calloway, one of the better-known conductors of "scat" orchestras, has composed a "rhythm swing number," which he has titled "Keep That Hi-De-Ho in Your Soul," for First National's production of "The Singing Kid," in which he and his men appear in support of Al Jolson. Calloway wrote both the lyrics and the music for the number, which is sung by Jolson. This is the picture for which Allen Jenkins was called back to Hollywood from his recent truant vacation in the East. "The Singing Kid" was near completion last week, under the direction of William Keighley. Edward Everett Horton and Lyle Talbot also are in the cast. The original story was written by Robert Lord.

Bring on Your Offspring.

This "twin derby," as it has been dubbed, being conducted by Loew's Palace Theater, in conjunction with the premiere Washington showing of "Rose Marie," beginning today, is getting a little too complicated for the complete comprehension of any bachelor occupant of a drama desk.

It started out as a prize competition embracing only the parents of twins born during the engagement of the musical production at the Palace. Now it has been expanded to take in triplets, fractions of quadruplets, if any, and whatnot.

If triplets are born to any parents during the showing of "Rose Marie" the prizes will be awarded if the trio, if boys, are christened, Nelson, after Nelson Eddy; Woody, after Director W. S. Van Dyke, and Hunt, after Producer Hunt Stromberg.

If all girls they can be named Jeanette, after Jeanette MacDonald, and Rose and Marie, after the title of the M-G-M musical.

Shades of Sam Lloyd.

If there is a combination of boys and girls any of the six names above may be used. If only twins are born, they may be named Rose and Marie if girls, Nelson and Woody, if both boys, and Nelson and Jeanette if boy and girl.

The Palace will deposit $25 in a local account in the name of the twins or triplets who are first born during the period of the contest and accordingly named, while Lansburgh's department store will contribute some necessary items valued at about $50.

So there you are, and, as the saying goes, and may the best man win!

It seems not to pay to come into Washington and attempt a ticket swindle such as is so often "put over" in larger and more gullible cities.

There were a couple of lads from out of town who set up a fine sales structure for themselves on the pretext of selling tickets for the benefit of the reinstatement fund of the NVA, good for an all-star vaudeville performance in the National Theater on March 2. They were cleverly trapped by local theater interests, haled into court and given 120 days each by Judge McMahon yesterday.

You will find something about all this in the news columns to-today's issue of The Post. So let this be a lesson to you grifters!

Hopeless Appeal Note.

Will you be my valentine? I don't even get any good offers any more!

You Remember What Day This Is?

With the aid of crinolines, an appropriate lacy outline and a bit of photographic trickery, Marsha Hunt becomes a perfect symbol of the sentimental implications of St. Valentine's Day, surrounded by a legend it would be difficult to resist. Miss Hunt is a beautiful young Paramount player, who has the leading feminine role in "Desert Gold." One would have to hunt far for a lovelier valentine than this.

Broadway Goes to Miami By Ed Sullivan

Moon Over Miami.

Miami Beach, Feb. 12.—Wonder why a fellow like Bill Dwyer is having tough luck? . . . Don't think the big fellow ever has done a mean thing in his life, and his list of charities would stretch from here to there . . . Sometimes it's a puzzling old world . . . Perhaps you have to have a mean streak in your makeup to make good . . . There's a yacht anchored in Biscayne Bay that belongs to a drunken, quarrelsome millionaire . . . Quite a few drunken, loud-mouthed millionaires in these parts. Mean, cantankerous individuals who are of no use to anybody . . . But they are millionaires, and they have their yachts and their stock market seats, their mistresses, and a good fellow like Dwyer has tough luck . . . He always has spread his money, using it to benefit the greatest number of people . . . I give up . . . Maybe you know the answer.

Biggest laugh I've received down in this section is H. Richman's introduction of one song he does . . . He says "And now I'd like to sing a song that expresses my philosophy of life" . . . He sings "Give me the road, the wide, winding highway," etc., etc. . . . Just a big, rough-and-ready matinee idol vagabond . . . Carolyn Marsh, cute lass, who is with the Ritz Brothers' show at the Hangar, won a tremendous ovation . . . Nobody in the jammed house knew that she had to use heavier makeup to disguise the scarred lip she received in a car crash two days previous . . . Patou Sisters, in the same show, send back most of their earnings to defray the sanitarium expenses of their mother . . . The Ritzes had the biggest opening of the local season, with every table taken and 300 turned away . . . The answer is that people want to laugh. They have enough problems of their own, and slapstick comedy is a safety valve.

I. J. Fox, biggest furrier in the country, explained the hard and fast business rule that prevails in his company . . . It is strictly forbidden for any two executives to take the same plane . . . If there were five of his lieutenants in St. Louis, for instance, they'd return on five separate planes . . . "If a plane crashes, we can't afford to have our entire man power wiped out," he explained . . . Probably other business organizations have the same safe and sane rule, but it's the first time I've heard of it.

Bob Hall, the vaudeville rhymester, is enjoying a great vogue at local affairs . . . At the premiere of "Rhodes, the Empire Builder," a British production, starring that grand performer, Walter Huston, Buddy Rogers introduced him and Hall stepped out on the string-piece and composed a rhyme that referred to all of us who had been introduced in the audience . . . He even worked in a sly reference to the bald pate of John Hays Hammond, one of the great mining engineers of the half-century . . . The rhyming gift is natural, Hall tells me . . . He first discovered it as a newsboy in Philadelphia . . . Instead of shouting his headlines, he rhymed them . . . Vaudeville was the next stop.

---

Nicest kid in the Miami colony is Buddy Rogers, modest and well-mannered . . . He is one of the record-breakers of the profession, still holding the all-time record for a week's gross at the New York Paramount Theater . . . Robert Halliday, at the Miami-Biltmore, is another performer whose talent is matched by his breeding . . . His "Lover Come Back to Me" is still one of the grander things to hear . . . Steve Hannegan and Bill Corum, the lucky stiffs, won the daily double at Hialeah . . . Their $2 ticket won $260 . . . Class spots of the night club circuit are the Forge and Beach and Tennis Club . . . Max Kalik, one of the biggest bookmakers in the racing game (he'll handle bets up to $20,000 on a race), says that people should hold themselves to $2 bets . . . "Then it's fun," he explains . . . "But when you start betting hundreds and thousands, it's a grim business that whitens your hair."

Sitting in front of the ocean cabana which Henry L. Doherty turned over to me . . . I was flattered no end when a 10-year-old came up and asked for an autograph . . . I signed it carefully . . . The youngster grabbed it eagerly, read it and then in gloom that beggars description, said: "Aw, nuts—they told me you were the heavyweight champion, Jimmy Braddock . . . A. P. correspondent who covered Braddock's trip back to Jersey to see his ailing, 2-year-old child . . . Evidently is not married . . . The story related the happiness of the 2-year-old daughter on learning that her famous dad was rushing to her bedside, and gave everything but a direct quote from the infant . . . Rose-Marie Braddock must be a very chatty 2-year-old.

Fortune's interesting article on Palm Beach is worth the attention of those who chart marriage . . . An attempt to analyze the causes that ruin it . . . Of 12 Palm Beach women, each a millionairess, eight have married three times, and two have been married four times . . . Of 12 Palm Beach male millionaires, four have been married three times . . . But most interesting is the complete total . . . Of the 24 Palm Beach men and women listed, all of them have been married at least twice . . . I guess Cupid doesn't thrive in a setting of too much dough, the little fellow feeling more at home in cottages and tenements, where he doesn't have to dress for dinner.

Revival of George Arliss' Distinguished Picture of "Disraeli" Is Real Coup

Noted Film Is Still Eminent Piece of Work

Star and Supporting Cast Have Lost Nothing in Passing of Years.

"DISRAELI," Warner Brothers revival of their picturization of the play by Louis N. Parker, adapted to the screen by Julian Josephson, starring George Arliss, supported by Joan Bennett, Florence Arliss, David Torrence, Doris Lloyd, Anthony Bushnell, Joan Emerson, Margaret Mann, Gwendolen Logan, Henry Cannon, Michael Visaroff and Charles B. Evans. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Reviewed Thursday afternoon by W. A. Whitsey.

If there were ever any question as to the validity of that old saw anent the eternal satisfaction to be derived from things of beauty, then the current attraction at the Belasco Theater should dispel all doubts, for in this revival of "Disraeli" it becomes the more manifest that a distinct actorial and artistic triumph was achieved some five or six years ago when Mr. George Arliss first relived upon the silver sheet the stirring episodes attendant upon the purchase by England of the Suez Canal.

Time has not dulled, nor has memory painted in too glowing colors the greatness of this picture. It still stands this day of high-standard entertainment a work great in theme, splendid in production and superlative in histrionics.

While not all the credit for the performance is his, still the greater portion of it is due the magnificent interpretation of the great English statesman (1804-1881), and his mightily battle around the year 1875 for the possession of the ditch in the shifting sands of the desert.

Arliss Supreme Artist.

The legitimate stage, before 1929, and the cinema more lately has given ample proof of the superb artistry of Mr. Arliss, for which there now is no need for further expostulation.

Nor does the superb cast which supports the star need additional encomiums—for here, indeed, is a roster whose members have been selected for the part, and each one turns in a performance the like of which he has seldom equalled during the passing of years.

Accordingly, we once again genuflect before superlative genius, profoundly offering thanks to the Belasco's astute management for bringing back this magnificent work—a truly cinematographic experience.

Chief among supplementary subjects is a recorded rendition of Hector Berlioz's "Carnaval Romain," played by the Orchestra du Conservatoire de Paris, under the direction of Philippe Gaubert.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, Feb. 12.

The movie stars are becoming movie boner fans. The latest to find a flicker flaw is Gary Cooper, who says he recalls that when he saw "Stars Over Broadway" the picture opened with a scene of Madison Square Garden. The front of the building was covered with placards reading "Louis-Braddock Fight." It is very nice of the movies to bill this fight, but the boxers aren't matched as yet.

Another actor who forwards a boner is Phil Regan, and it concerns the sequence in "Rose-Marie" where Nelson Eddy is riding with a group of the Northwest Mounted. All are singing, claims Regan. The chorus of voices is heard clearly enough—but not one Mountie's mouth is seen moving.

Actors and actresses are eligible for admission to the club. What I'm waiting for now is for an actor to tell about a boner in his own picture.

Now for the regular customers—the fans. In the flicker, "Three Kids and a Queen," writes Doris Cohn, when John Miljan goes into the phone booth with Frankie Darro, it is evident that they drove up to the store in a car—and they were alone.

However, when John Miljan is making his escape, there is a man in the car ready to drive him away. The movies certainly give their players service.

* * * *

The box office picture of this month must be "Rose-Marie," for plenty of movie boners about it have been received. That many people couldn't be writing about it if they hadn't seen the flicker.

Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald are in the canoe and Eddy is singing the song "Rose-Marie" to Miss MacDonald while he keeps paddling. But no matter how much Mr. Eddie paddles, says Louise Stolp, the scenery remains the same; he doesn't seem to be getting anywhere—except with Miss MacDonald.

In the sequence in which Miss MacDonald tries to cross the river on the horse, writes Ethel Sherman, she loses her small knitted hat. Yet when Nelson Eddy rescued her and Miss MacDonald stood on the bank, she was wearing the hat she had previously lost and her hair was dry.

After the halfbreed guide has been caught and he returns the stolen purse to Miss MacDonald, it is a big surprise to the person who signs her letter Winnie (Flash) Branley that Jeanette MacDonald doesn't dig into the purse to give him money. Instead she gets it from the supposed empty pocketbook.

In "Broadway Hostess," Allen Jenkins is seen riding a horse. The horse jumps over a fence. Later, claims Gilda Antinori, when the background of this scene is flashed on the screen no fence is to be seen. They were probably using it in another picture already.

* * * *

James Cagney in "Ceiling Zero," writes Nicholas Paledes, instead of forfeiting his license to the Government inspector, tears it in half, places the halves on top of each other, and then proceeds to tear the card into quarters, and finally eights. Yet in the final dramatic sequence when Pat O'Brien places the torn pieces together, the camera reveals only six torn pieces.

In the flicker, "Music Is Magic," there is a scene showing Bebe Daniels singing on the stage, and the orchestra is also on the stage. The musicians are wearing white suits. After Miss Daniels leaves the stage, says William Haughton, Alice Fay and Mitchell and Durant come on doing a Spanish rumba. The same orchestra is still in the pit, but now they are wearing dark suits.

240 Entries At Camden's Horse Show

46 Leading Owners of U.S. to Exhibit Hunters Tomorrow.

5 Classes to Be Displayed in Morning, 9 More in Afternoon.

By Dudley Harmon.

Any other season of the year but winter, Camden, S. C., is a small, rather unexciting Southern town, given over largely to a few old residential families and several thousand mill workers.

But comes Thanksgiving, and the great, stately homes which line the streets are thrown open as people from all over the country come to Camden for the hunting for which it is famous. Long stretches of pine woods and natural courses have made Camden these last few years an ever increasing magnet for the horsey set.

This year an enterprising group of Virginians has arranged a horse show in which entries have been made by the country's most prominent stable owners. The show takes place tomorrow at stables near the Springdale Course, over which the Washington Birthday races and Carolina Cup races are run.

Styled "Virginians."

The show was organized by J. North Fletcher and Thomas M. Waller, of Warrenton, and Randolph Duffey, of Middleburg. These three, amateur racers and trainers all, have styled themselves the "Virginians," and maintain extensive stables and a string of horses in Camden throughout the winter.

To help make their show a success, the "Virginians" enlisted the aid of Miss Viola Winmill, of Warrenton and New York, and Miss Wilhelmine Kirby, of Bedford Hills, N. Y., who is secretary of the committee in charge. Miss Kirby has received 240 entries from 46 owners. Fourteen classes will be shown.

Five classes will be displayed in the morning. Then exhibitors will take time out for luncheon, which will be served at the show. Afterward, nine more classes will be shown.

Classes are as follows: Best steeplechase type, model hunters, 3-year-olds, bridle path hacks, open jumping, working hunters, green hunters, middleweight hunters, lightweight hunters, hunters not to jump, ladies' hunters, pair class, touch and out, and teams of three hunters.

Indigo Is Entered.

Among the famous racers entered is Mrs. John Schiff's Indigo, voted last season the best timber horse in the country. Mrs. "Pete" Bostwick, wife of the polo player, who is wintering in Aiken, has entered Fugitive, whose laurels won in the past are still green. Mrs. Robert C. Winmill, whose horse farm is one of the largest in Warrenton, has entered Cin Quidado, and Miss Kirby will try for a prize with her racer Easter Morning.

Mrs. Marion duPont Somerville, who lives in Montpelier, Va., in the old house once occupied by James Madison, has entered one of her horses, which are among the best cross-country runners in the United States. Mr. Robert Daniels, owner of Brandon Farms, at Brandon, Va., where the main house still bears scars left from the time the British threw shells at it in the War of 1812, also has an entrant.

Others Contesting.

Others out for a prize are Mrs. Carroll K. Bassett, who has a farm in Warrenton; Mr. Ward Belcher, of Lakeville, Conn.; Mrs. Paul Abbott, of Huntington, Long Island; Mr. Thomas H. Somerville, Orange, Va.; Mrs. Lamont Dominick, Millbrook, N. Y.; Mr. D. Walter Mabee, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; Mr. W. B. Ruthrauff, Rumson, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Alvin T. Untermyer, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. C. P. DuBose, jr., Camden; Miss Frances Thord-Gray, of Greenwich, Conn.; Mr. David R. Williams, of Mulberry Plantation, Camden; Mrs. Dwight Partridge, Great Barrington, Mass.; Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Mrs. Melville Bearns, jr., of Warrenton.

Jock McLean, son of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, has a house in Camden this winter with Mr. Henry Frost, of Middleburg. Both will attend the show in which Mr. Frost's horses are being shown. Others are Mr. Harry Kirkover, of Buffalo, N. Y., M. F. H. of the Genesee Valley Hunt; Mr. James Ryan, of Unionville, Pa.; Mr. Lyle Phillips, of Andover, Mass., and Mr. F. Ambrose Clark, of Westbury, Long Island.

Several Warrentonians visiting in Camden will take part in the show. Among them are Miss Jane Wilbur, Miss Emily North King and Mr. Alex Calvert.

Joint Concert Slated Tonight

Giron-Tougorsky Event to Draw Diplomats of the Capital.

The joint concert of Senorita Mercedes Giron, coloratura soprano, and Basil P. de Tougorsky, Russian pianist, to be given at the Shoreham Hotel at 5 o'clock this afternoon, will be attended by the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, the Ambassador of Brazil, Mr. Oswaldo Aranha; the Ambassador of Cuba, Dr. Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui and many other members of the Diplomatic Corps. Senorita Giron is the daughter of Dr. Manuel Giron, former Minister from Guatemala to Washington.

Senorita Giron has come recently from Havana, Cuba, where her brother, Mr. Charles Giron, is Consul General from Guatemala. She will sing tomorrow a Cuban song which met with much success in Havana, "Daughter of the Sun," written especially for her. A Cuban orchestra will accompany her.

Senorita Giron will make a concert tour of the country and will return to Washington in April to sing at the Pan American Union.

WAS IT MURDER?

By James Hilton

CHAPTER XXIX.

TWO DAYS LATER, at the hour of 10 in the morning, Colin Revell sat up in bed at his Islington lodgings and gloomily surveyed the sunlight streaming in at the sides of the window blind. He had slept badly—had had troubled, nightmarish dreams that had wakened him from time to time in a sickly glow of perspiration. Now, as his full consciousness returned, the nightmare horrors vanished, but memories took their place—and memories that were hardly to be preferred.

After a wash, but without his customary bath and shave, Revell descended to his ground-floor sitting room. He turned to the sideboard and brought out a gin bottle. Before opening it he went to his desk for a ruler and measured the height of the liquid—5⅜ inches. And when he had gone to bed it had been 6. Mrs. Hewston again, he reflected, without malice, without even irritation. She always did and she always would, and what the hell did it matter, anyway?

What did anything matter, in fact? He mixed himself a stiff gin-and-tonic and drank it off at a gulp. Then he sat heavily in his chair beside the empty firegrate and closed his eyes.

But behind his closed eyes there was no relief. Indeed, thoughts and images only crowded more impetuously; he lived again through those frightful moments at the top of the sick-room staircase; felt again that fearful brain-splitting shock when Guthrie had flashed his torch through the doorway of the fifth room. What had happened after that was still, as it had been at the time, a vague nightmare in his mind. The woman's wild shriek of defiance, her tigerish attack, Guthrie's ruthless but calm retaliation and that horrible procession of the three of them up to the moment of his collapse. He still saw her blazing, hunted eyes, and still heard her hoarse screaming. . . . Oh, damn it all, there was nothing for it but another drink.

But while mixing it he heard footsteps and voices outside his room, and in a few moments Mrs. Hewston opened the door with the information, given in a tone of graveyard sympathy, that a gentleman had called to see him. And before he could give any reply Detective Guthrie came into view and, after a friendly nod of dismissal to Mrs. Hewston, stepped past her into the room.

Guthrie Proposes Lunch.

"Well, my lad," he began, "I came chiefly to tell you that for the present, at any rate, I don't think we shall need your evidence. I quite appreciate your scruples in the matter, and it's just possible we may be able to do without you altogether, even at the Assizes. I'll do my best for you, anyhow. We shan't, of course, take up the matter of the attempted attack on you. Too many counts on the indictment never help the prosecution. So you needn't fear you're going to have a lot of limelight turned on you."

Revell nodded. "Thanks. That's good of you."

"Oh, don't thank me—it was all decided at the Yard, but I was very glad, of course, for your sake." His gaze roved round the room. "Look here, don't let me interrupt your breakfast."

"You're not doing—I didn't intend to have any."

"Oh, nonsense, man—you must eat. Look here, come to lunch with me in town—we'll go to some quiet little place where we can chat, if you like. There's a French restaurant I know near Leicester Square—you'll have an appetite for the food there when you see it, I'm certain. Go up and dress and I'll wait for you down here."

Over an hour later—shortly after noon, to be precise—Revell and the detective stepped out of a taxi in a narrow Soho street. Revell's spirits were, if anything, a shade less doleful. To begin with, he had put on a new brown suit that his tailor had just finished for him, and he was distinctly aware that he looked well in it. London, too, was less gloomy than Islington, and even beyond his misery there were the beginnings of hunger.

In the small anteroom to the restaurant the detective broke his rule and drank a cocktail, Revell stood a second one, and after that the two repaired to a table and composed what Revell had to admit was a really creditable lunch.

During the meal he spoke little but Guthrie kept up an entertaining flow of talk, just faintly tinged with "shop." Revell found him quite amusing to listen to; indeed, he was rather surprised to find him possessed of such conversational powers.

Revell Discusses Theories.

At Guthrie's suggestion they took coffee and liqueurs in a small room at the rear of the restaurant, and good black coffee, excellent old brandy and a cigarette made even Revell feel that life was partially worth living. "Good place, this," he commented. "I must come here again."

Guthrie nodded. "Yes, they give you good food and don't worry you with trimmings. Are you busy this afternoon, by the way?"

Revell shook his head. "I've nothing on that can't be let go, anyhow."

"Good. I'm quite free too, as it happens. I thought, as we may not meet again for some time, you might care to hear a bit about the case. Don't hesitate to say so, though, if you'd rather not."

"I'd like to hear about it—I think."

Guthrie paused, puffed at his pipe for a few seconds, and then went on: "I could easily, if I wanted to, pose as a Heaven-sent Sherlock in this affair, but I'm not going to. I'd rather be frank—after all, I shall get quite enough credit in the newspapers. They'll boom me no end, which will be very gratifying, of course, but the plain truth is—and I don't mind admitting it to you—that except for spotting the culprit I haven't been particularly right about things. By the way, if you're going to listen to the full yarn, I must just put through a telephone call first, if you don't mind—shan't be a minute."

When he came back, after the interlude he resumed: "Yes, I was fairly wrong as well as fairly right. I was wrong, for instance, about the death of the first boy. I was wrong about Lambourne's death, too. Of course, when I say I was right in this and wrong in that, I only mean that my preconceived theories do or do not tally with the woman's confession."

Tells of Confession.

"Did she volunteer a confession, then?" Revell's voice trembled a little in the varying throes of brandy and memory.

"More or less. I gave her the usual warning, of course, but she began to talk, all the same. After the big scene she just caved in—they often do."

He continued: "Let's clear up a few side issues first of all. There was Roseveare, to begin with. I admit I began by suspecting him—not tremendously, but on general principles. There was, and perhaps is, something just faintly fishy about him."

"I rather liked him, anyhow."

"So did I—so did everybody. He was likable. Just the opposite with Ellington, of course—nobody did like Ellington, and most people were more than willing to believe the worst about him."

"Why on earth did his wife marry him, I wonder?"

"Why did he marry her, for that matter? There was a scandal over her at the hospital where she was a nurse. She wasn't even technically faithful to Ellington, and it was that, I think—some affair that she had with someone—that made him come back to England and ask Roseveare for a job."

"Decent of Roseveare to give him one."

"Oh yes. And it increased, of course, Ellington's gratitude. Mrs. Elington, too, was pleased, and the first thing she did at Oakington was to fall in love with the Head. And I daresay Roseveare, behind his coy and innocent manner, wasn't wholly insusceptible—in fact, I rather think he was just a little bit of a fool over her. Ellington hadn't told Roseveare anything against her—he was a man of honor to that extent. So the friendship prospered, and while everything was going on so nicely Robert Marshall met his death by the accidental fall of a gas-fitting in the dormitory."

King Is Threat To Weasel Clan

Edward VIII Needs Ermine for Coronation Robes; Prices Go Up.

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 28.—Dire things are about to happen to the weasels of the Northwest, all because England has a new King.

The Northwest weasel, close relative of the Russian ermine, provides most of the traditional trimming of the royal cape. Furriers recalled the boom years of 1888, 1894, 1900, 1905, 1907 and 1910, years preceding coronations of yesteryear.

More than 150 ermine furs are required to make an average ermine cape.

Hyman Yewdall, of Seattle, veteran of 30 years in the business, was en route to Vancouver, British Columbia, today, to bid on 10,000 ermine furs available there.

Last week, Yewdall and other buyers bid up all available furs at the Tacoma fur auction to a price 25 to 50 per cent above the average at the previous sale.

Business Girl's Kit Now Holds All Toiletries

And This Attractive Makeup Is Priced Within Reach of Everyone.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE TIME is definitely past when a businesswoman thinks that appearance plays small part in the professional world.

Nowadays, she knows that her face is part of fortune, and her general effect of grooming extremely important.

As a consequence, you'll find in her desk drawer many of the fundamentals for accenting her good looks. As a general thing, she has a powder of one kind, a rouge of another, lipstick from one company, foundation cream from another, etc., etc. And why? For the simple reason that it's never been an easy matter to find one little kit, right size for the desk drawer, and priced for a modest budget, that held all the make-up essentials.

But that aspect of the question has changed with the advent of the new make-up kit so ideally suited to a business woman's needs. It contains a protective cream, and a skin tonic, a finishing lotion, cream rouge, lipstick, and powder, eye shadow and brow pencil. What's more, the kit is available in eight different shades for blondes, brunettes, and in-betweens.

The price of the kit—$1.29.

Morning, Noon and Night.

THERE is a Parisian designer whose name, while not as easy to pronounce, is as familiar to us as Jones, Smith or Brown. In her opinion, perfumes that are suitable to morning wear are wrong for afternoon and evening, and vice versa. So she, equipped with a vivid imagination, went to work with a well-known chemist to turn out her idea of perfection in perfumes. Three, she wanted, and she would name them Morning, Noon, and Night.

After a long time she and the chemist finally found just the three fragrances. Mated they were, but different. It was then she set to work to design a bottle and, with the ingenuity which has led her to success, she decided on squarish crystal flacons held in squarish cork boxes.

Though you may never yet have thrilled to perfume, you will when you sample these.

Chinese Importations.

CONNOISSEURS of Chinese decorations will be all agog when they see the newest importations in a downtown store. Here on the seventh floor is an intriguing nook, where Chinese porcelains, pottery pieces, paintings, carved wood-images, pewter pieces and old Chinese Chippendale mirrors await interested visitors. Even the casual onlooker finds this a worth-while corner to visit.

Cunning Sachets.

SACHETS—cunning little pink satin "pillows" delightfully scented, to slip in among your lingerie, gloves or handkerchiefs. A single sachet will impart a delicate fragrance that lingers indefinitely. A perfect "little gift" for any woman—something to keep in mind for Valentine's Day.

Mannish as the Mode Demands

Spring Hats Defy Conventions, Low Crowns, Some With None

By Frances Mangum.

HATS for the spring are defying conventions. They have high crowns, low crowns, no crowns. They sprawl, they roll, they soar upward like skyscrapers. They're in coachman, cardinal and coolie styles. They range from derbies to stovepipes. They're a bit Flemish, a bit Chinese. In fact, they're everything but monotonous.

Mannish suits have called forth mannish hats. There are the fedoras, the Homburgs, the sailors, bowlers and berets. Some of these are frankly what they are. Others definitely feminized. Due to a tendency to combine severely tailored attire with frivolously frilled accessories, some hats designed on strictly masculine lines have annexed a fluff of feathers, or a piquant bouquet of flowers, or a fly-away ribbon bow.

Three influences on hats this season come from across the seas. First, the Chinese exhibition in London has resulted in coolie styles ranging from the small round flat models, those with wide brims sloping upward to a short low pagoda-like crown. Then, too, there are those devastating hats following the idea of a Ming headdress.

The other two influences may be traced to Paris, where a Flemish exhibition, and a play, "Margot," are in full swing. Undoubtedly the stunning costumes seen in the show have affected a number of leading designers whose fashion theories are heard round the world. The result—hats modeled after those in the time of Mary Stuart and Henry the III, hats with ruff-like brims, or hats like coachmen's, and swashbuckling, dandyish hats.

Since the Flemish exhibition got under way many hats have begun to look like those shown in the old paintings. Now there are peasant bonnets with flaring brims turned up from the face, sedate cardinal hats with shallow crowns and half rolled brims and other variations.

There is less news in hat materials. As usual felt predominates for early spring wear in sports hats. Then, of course, there is straw. It is interesting to note how highly polished and shiny the straw hats have a tendency to be. Next, fabric. Many materials such as you find in dresses have been stiffened to use for spring bonnets.

Dark hats one inevitably finds highlighted with a colorful something whether it be bow, flower or feather. And gay, colorful hats, there are in abundance. Hats in crimson, turquoise blue, grass green and canary yellow, tropical orange and Iris purple.

Veils, too. No hat story this season is complete with some emphasis on veils. They are fluttering forth in soft fine netting, tying in bows, fastening under chins and falling like mist from the brim. And then there are the other veils, the coarser ones. These appear on tailored hats and dribble two or three inches over the brim in an enchantingly coquettish fashion. Or they, too, tie around the crowns and spread into a flippant bow.

Are You Toper Of Medicines? It's a Bad Habit

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

FORTUNATE is he who can say truthfully that he has never taken a dose of medicine in his life. If there is such a person (and I am sure there are some), he has probably observed, designedly or instinctively, the fundamental rules of health, and common sense has dominated his program of activity.

An inspection of the medicine chest in thousands of homes would probably disclose an array of bottles and boxes of all types, some carelessly arranged, others in neat, or even alphabetical order. Such a cabinet is essential in every household, and it should contain half a dozen or so standard remedies, no one of which is used daily, monthly, or even once a year, unless the need appears.

Too Much Medicine.

A short time ago a friend insisted that I look over the medicine cabinet in his home. Throwing open the door, he said proudly: "What do you think of it? Isn't that preparedness?" Every bit of space was packed with labeled containers, and I counted 42 different varieties. He looked crestfallen when I replied, "There are just 35 too many."

I recognized instantly that this man was oversolicitous about his health and that scarcely a single item had been prescribed by his physician. Most of them had been purchased as the result of suggestions given him by "hipped" acquaintances. There was not a box or a bottle that had not been opened.

He is a perfectly normal, healthy person. While I have never examined him, I am morally certain that he is receiving in his diet adequate vitamins, and yet he was taking a vitamin concentrate three times daily. He was also consuming a so-called tonic that was as essential (for him) as a new foundation for Pikes Peak.

Judging from the contents of his "drug store" he must have had about six different varieties of stomach disease, as there were at least a dozen "aids to digestion." As most of us know, if the stomach is not supplying the normal amount of hydrochloric acid we may be obliged to take this substance before meals. Or, if a stomach ulcer is present, alkalis or other appropriate remedies will probably be required. But to put hydrochloric acid into a normal stomach or to take alkalis to correct a condition that does not exist will cause damage. So far as I know my friend had the normal amount of hydrochloric acid and at no time has he given the slightest evidence of having a peptic ulcer.

There were four laxatives. To my query, "Do you need a laxative?" he replied, "No, but I think it is well to clear out the system about once a week, don't you?" Again he appeared a bit disappointed when I did not wholeheartedly agree.

During the bridge game that followed I received several sly hints that perhaps a liver tonic might be good for me and I felt that I was lucky to escape without a dose of some of his favorite remedies.

Medicine Toper.

I wondered how much time this splendid chap used in purchasing and taking medicine. He is really a medicine toper; I suppose he looks upon his drugs as an investment in good health from which he demands returns. The whole outfit did not cost him less than $100 and, to him, doses were dividends.

Are there many like him? I hope not, but I am afraid there are. Some people just would not feel natural unless they had a bottle of medicine or a box of capsules with which to "doctor" themselves before or after meals. After a while they come to look upon certain tablets as old friends and they cannot get along without them.

Some day I am going to talk to my friend, that is, when he is my guest. I shall tell him that I am glad to know that he is health conscious but, for the sake of his constitution, he must forget to be medicine conscious.

Our pharmacists are indispensable, as there are many valuable and important remedies that can be applied with excellent effect to known disease conditions. But why fire ammunition at an enemy that does not exist?

Daily Bathing Makes Baby Enjoy Living

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THERE ARE charming and appetizing babies and there are others who are unattractive and repulsive, and the blame or credit for both kinds of children generally can be laid on the mother. Some mothers do not see the need to keep a tiny child dainty and attractive. They resent spending so much time dressing and undressing it, washing its clothes and making the frequent changes which are part of an infant's care. They do not realize that his appearance in babyhood may have a lasting effect on his whole life.

The child whom people like to see, whom they long to take up and dandle, early develops an outgoing attitude toward others. He may be carefully guarded from too much attention and may be brought up as hygienically as his parents please, but when he is introduced to people, if only to his own family, he is at once the object of adoration which is the tiny baby's right.

The dainty baby is, furthermore, far happier than the untidy one. He is comfortable and therefore cheerful.

Daintiness does not necessitate spending money. No baby needs frills and furbelows to enhance its charm. The plainer and less fussy its clothes, the better. The essential is scrupulous cleanliness, and that means either a great many clothes or a busy mother.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Is There Woman, Alone and Lonely, Who Would Welcome Opportunity to Enter Into Half-Ownership of Congenial Home, Gentle Petitioner Asks.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Your column from the beginning has had my interest. I must frankly tell you that, at the outset, I was attracted to it solely through curiosity. I was concerned only in seeing what you would—or could!—make of it. But what you straightway proceeded to make it securely fixed my attention. You have given your department, Miss Haworth, many individual and outstanding features, not the least of which has been the marked dignity with which you've endowed it. That alone has, for me, lifted it far above any other similar-purposed department I've ever chanced to see.

I should like, too, to pay tribute not only to the sound judgment and the splendidly constructive quality of your replies but also to the obvious sincerity and personal interest you bring to every problem presented to you for your advice. You have indubitably made "This Business of Living" a column of real distinction and wide helpfulness.

• • • •

I regret and apologize that my long-felt appreciation of your column has been permitted to wait for expression upon personal need. For, unexpectedly, I now find myself at your door. This is my situation, and for explicitness I shall, if I may, write in detail: Very recently, the source from which an important part of my income had been derived was permanently cut off. The modest remainder of my income is fully and lastingly secured to me for my lifetime, but the recent reduction has been such that it will be impossible for me to continue living on in the same way—which is a very simple way but a very home-satisfying way. Unless the income is rather immediately supplemented in some way, my life must be readjusted to meet the new conditions. But, if possible, I wish to plan things so I shall not have to give up my home.

• • • •

It might be well to interpolate here that I'm practically relative-less; my closest friends are established in their own homes, many of them in distant places. Even were I to desire it, it would not be feasible for me to become a member of any one of these homes. Nor do I have, as some fortunately do, an unattached friend who could join with me in maintaining the home.

Never would I attempt to live alone. Neither would I willingly become a part of the impersonal life of a boarding house, even were it a small one. I hope I do not give the impression of being a hopelessly unadjusted person. As a matter of fact, life has demanded many adjustments of me; so many, indeed, that I now feel entitled to as much personal latitude in making plans for the future as is comparable with good judgment.

• • • •

It has occurred to me, Miss Haworth, that within the wide range of your readers there must be some with a modest, independent income who, through circumstances, is now without a true home. And who, alone and lonely, would welcome the opportunity to enter into the real ownership of a congenial home again, not as a paying guest but as a partner on equal terms with an impartial equity in the home in all of its phases. I fully realize that before one could commit oneself to such a proposition much would have to be taken into consideration on both sides—particularly as to background, temperament, and individual tastes. But surely to such a household arrangement there need be no insurmountable barriers, since the world is full of persons of similar interests and tastes only wanting the right opportunity to be brought together. As to age, the preference would be for someone in the forties. . .

• • • •

Financially, the suggested plan would be somewhat more expensive than the cost of board in an average boarding house, but on the other hand it would be much less than the upkeep of a privately maintained apartment or residence. As must be plain, I for myself have no thought or desire for personal profit . . .

I wish, please, to emphasize that life in this home is simple. Nevertheless, it is gracious living. The home has the atmosphere of quiet culture created by belongings which have been lived with and loved by several generations. And there are books, books everywhere . . . The apartment, too, is of that comfortable size which assures freedom and privacy to everyone . . . It is a home to be happily lived in by persons of congenial tastes and a place to which to gladly welcome one's friends . . .

• • • •

I trust, Miss Haworth, I have not taken up too much space with this letter . . . but, as is obvious, I could not within the limited space of the average advertisement fully present my proposal. Nor is it my desire to reach only those who may be seeking a home. But it is my hope that through your widely read column my suggestion may also reach and favorably arrest the attention of some who, although alone and perhaps lonely, have never until now had presented (or personally thought of) such a solution to their own needs . . .

My deepest appreciation, Miss Haworth, of your kindness and courtesy. May I sign myself,

HOME LOVER.

Address Communications to This Column.

DEAR HOME LOVER: Your letter is one of the most charmingly phrased documents it has been my pleasure to receive during the lifetime of this column. That its writer is the happy product of a tradition of gracious living is a fact made manifest in every word set down. I shall be much pleased if, through the medium of this column, an answer to your gently stated need is provided. I have your name and address on file, and suggest that any who are interested address written, sealed communications to "Home Lover" in care of this column. Such mail will be promptly forwarded to you.

M. H.

Pleasant Homes

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"IT SEEMS only yesterday since my youngsters were at the playroom age," wrote a lady whose children now have homes of their own. "But here is an idea we worked out that I'd like to pass on to mothers today for their children. My husband got a smooth, wide board, then drew pencil outlines of a house, their initials and animals on it. Then he gave the children small nails and hammers and let them drive nails along the pencil outlines. So when they felt the urge to pound, they didn't take it out on the furniture."

And what a nice idea that is . . . at least, we know how we would have loved it when we were the hammer and nail age. It could be varied in any number of ways. A wide plank could be sawed in the shape of a house with doors, windows and decorations drawn on to be outlined with nails. Or saw the board in the shape of an ocean liner and let the children fill in the outline with nails.

Winner of Home Contest Says House of Future To Have Flowing Lines Both Inside and Out

Easy to Clean Furniture, and Minimum Steps in Kitchens to Rule.

By Sara Roberts Millhouse.

THE modern house with its functional use of classically smooth lines, work saving, easy-to-keep arrangements and furnishings will be the house of the future for the busy woman. Combination living and dining rooms; probbaly kitchens with continous work space and step-saving devices and cabinets, tainly will be a part of this house.

This opinion was expressed by Bubi Jessen, prominent young Texas architect, who has been visiting friends in Washington and Alexandria.

Mr. Jessen, last month won the $1,000 first prize in the Portland Cement Co's competion for a modern, permanent, fire safe home of five rooms to cost only $4,500. His, and other prize-winning plans will be shown as a travelling exhibit, and his design is expected to be used in erecting a model fire-safe house at the Texas centennial celebration to be held this summer in Dallas.

With considerable experience crowded into his 27 years which includes establishing a reputation as a water colorist and murals painter as well as architect, Mr. Jessen is an ardent exponent of all that is usefully new in architecture. His views, he says are shared by most women with whom he comes in contact.

He listed some of the reasons why women like modern architecture. "It is useful without loss of beauty; it is purely functional and utilitarian; it is more stylized, more adaptable, more sanitary, easier to keep clean, and more easily arranged than any other style of building or interior decoration we have known."

"By functional," we mean that it serves a purpose. For instance, a desk is purely something to write on. Modern conceive it as just that, designig it to give the utmost in usefulness. It has no dust collecting, hard-to-keep ornateness in carved legs, etc. Yet today's use of materials, woods or compositions, colors and flowing lines make it beautiful.

The neoteric house and furnishings fulfill the need of today's busy woman whose activities leave little time for household drudgery. Only the woman who can afford servants or has a great deal of time, can afford ornate houses and furniture, antiques or whatever furnishings she fancies.

"But I doubt that many women really prefer antiques for their richly mellowed woods and delicacy of design to the comfort and adaptibility of modern things," he said. "Often, antique collecting is merely a hobby-pieces to show because of their rarity and value, or else to be re-sold at a profit. Most women associate warmth with the richness of cured woods. They may also have warmth of woods in the more practical interiors and furnishings of today."

New Architecture Useful, He Says, Without Loss of Beauty.

Of the combination dining room-living room combination so much in favor with many architects and used in his prize winning design, Mr. Jessen said:

"Women like it! Most women think of a dining room in terms of a place to set table, to have it beautiful and an attractive place for guests to be. With the combination arrangement separated by screens, curtains or sliding doors which roll up or slide into closets, the hostess can have the table out of sight when the guests arrive. When the screens are withdrawn, there is all the serving space you need. The table may be placed far out in the room or near the kitchen and you have all the spacious feeling of the living room."

Today's kitchen is a miracle of compactness, of efficiency, of beauty, of time and energy saving arrangement and devices. Sentiment concerning old kitchens fades before its combination of the ingeniousness of modern architecture, invention and engineering.

"A woman usually has very definite ideas about her kitchen," said Mr. Jessen. "But whatever her idea it is probably already manufactured and is awaiting her individual requirements as to height, habits and methods. Any good kitchen company makes possible the necessary continuous work space around the entire room. And standard cabinets are now so flexible that they will take care of every possible kitchen need without an inch of superfluous step-wasting space.

Stainless steel is the most practical and effective material for kitchen use, and porcelains and compositions are good. The colors are marvelous. Only in the play room can such effective color combinations be achieved as in the kitchen."

NOT long ago I was like some friends I have...low in spirits...run-down...out of sorts...tired easily and looked terrible. I knew I had no serious organic trouble so I reasoned sensibly...as my experience has since proven...that work, worry, colds and whatnot had just worn me down.

The confidence mother has always had in S.S.S. Tonic...which is still her stand-by when she feels run-down...convinced me I ought to try this Treatment...I started a course. The color began to come back to my skin...I felt better...I did not tire easily and soon I felt that those red-blood-cells were back to so-called fighting strength...it is great to feel strong again and like my old self.

Insist on S.S.S. Tonic in the blood-red Cellophane-wrapped package...the big 20-oz. size is sufficient for two weeks' treatment...it's more economical, too. © S.S.S. Co.

Revised Bill Fails to End Airport Row

Smith to Fight Sixth Draft of Measure on Road Closing.

By James D. Secrest.

The controversy over the proposed closing of Military road in Arlington County as a hazard to Washington Airport continued last night despite the agreement of the Senate and House Military Affairs committees on the sixth draft of a resolution.

Although Chairman McSwain, of the House Military Affairs Committee, appeared confident the National Airport Corporation will not remove its traffic guards tomorrow or until adequate safeguards are provided by the War Department, Samuel J. Solomon, airport manager, thought otherwise.

"I will not change my plan to remove the traffic guards at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon unless the Secretary of War or another authorized governmental agency specifically states that the National Airport Corporation may maintain guards on Military road," Solomon said.

"So far I have received no such word, and I was told at the War Department there will be none forthcoming."

Sub-Committees Adjourn.

Earlier the Senate and House sub-committees, after a brief hearing, had adjourned with the impression that the "emergency" had been temporarily averted.

Chairman McSwain read a letter from the Secretary of War stating that the War Department will take no further steps in the immediate future to force the airport owners to remove traffic guards and signal lights. The War Department last week appealed to the Justice Department for advice on how it might proceed.

Adding to the complications facing the joint sub-committees, Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, stated he would oppose the latest draft of the resolution because it contains a provision which would allow the Secretary of War to close Military road without setting up machinery for the construction of a substitute highway.

Demands Provision.

"I will oppose any and all resolutions that allow the War Department to close the road, but make no provision for the thousands of Arlington County people who now travel on Military road," Smith said.

"However, if the resolution is limited merely to authorizing the erection of safeguards, I will approve it so long as the road remains open. Arlington County doesn't want the $50,000, it merely wants a roadway."

Chairman McSwain, when informed of Smith's stand, stated that the sub-committee would be willing to consider any "reasonable proposal for settling this controversy," but he declined to say whether Smith's proposal would be acceptable.

As now drafted into Senate and House measures, the latest resolution states that "pending the time when an airport is established and maintained for the District of Columbia" Military road shall be closed "except under such regulations as the Secretary of War may provide."

Authorizes Safeguards.

It further authorizes the Secretary of War to maintain whatever safeguards are necessary at the expense of the National Airport Corporation.

Solomon told the sub-committees yesterday that the corporation would be willing to bear the expense of the traffic guards or other devices set up by the War Department so long as the cost did not exceed $500 a month which the airport has been paying to maintain present safeguards.

The sub-committees, after listening to Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, assail the proposal to pay Arlington County $50,000 to build a new road as "Congressional bribery," struck out the provision for sale of the road either to the airport or at auction.

The resolution in its present form is now almost identical to the draft agreed upon last week except that it allows construction of barricades as an alternative to closing.

Gives Advice How To Develop Pupils

Speaking to the New York City Association of English Teachers, Dr. John L. Tildsley said that among the characteristics to be developed in pupils are an inquiring mind and open-mindedness. ## District Leads 12 Other Cities In School Slash

'Depression Economy' in '34 Greater Here, Census Report Reveals.

Washington schools have suffered more from "depression economy" than the schools of most other cities of the same size in the country, a report of the Census Bureau revealed yesterday.

Not only was the proportion of the city's total operating expenses allotted to education for 1934 lower here than in any of the 12 cities with populations ranging from 300,000 to 500,000, but the per capita reduction in Washington from 1933 to 1934 was greater than all except three of these cities.

In 1933 the per capita expense for educating each child was $18.13, while in 1934 the cost was $16.73, a net loss of $1.40. Only Kansas City, Mo., with a reduction of $1.72; Seattle with a $2.36 loss, and Jersey City, N. J., with a $1.95 slash, suffered more drastic cuts.

Among the cities of comparable size, whose per capita education expense increased over the period, were Minneapolis, Minn.; Cincinnati, Ohio; Newark, N. J.; Rochester, N. Y.; Houston, Tex., and Louisville, Ky.

The actual amount of money spent here was greater than in any of the dozen cities, excepting Newark, N. J., but the proportion to the total city budget represents only 24.1 per cent. In all other cities the proportion was higher.

Compared with the preceding year, and to 1926, education's share of the Capital's budget has declined steadily. In 1926 it represented 30.7 per cent of the total budget; while in 1933 it was 28 per cent.

'Sixth Sense'

It Saved Citizens' Head From Crash.

Saved by what he described as "a sixth sense," John Francis Hillyard, president of the Michigan Park Citizens Association, last night told of a near-collision between his car and a speeding freight train.

He was so aroused by the threatened accident he announced he would lead a fight by his association to expedite construction of an overpass at the "death trap" grade crossing of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in Michigan avenue northeast.

"I had the scare of my life," he explained.

"It was so close I'm still shaking. I was driving alone down the hill toward the grade crossing when I heard the alarm bell ringing.

"The gates were not down. That's why I considered crossing without stopping because I didn't see any train.

"I would have gone on across 999 times out of 1,000. This time, a sixth sense told me to stop. My car finally stopped about 4 feet from the tracks. Just then a freight train, going backward, without lights, shot by at about 30 miles an hour."

Hillyard added a watchman with a red lantern appeared after the train passed and said he was so busy trying to force down the frozen gates he failed to warn approaching motorists.

The Public Utilities Commission, at the request of the citizens' group recently rerouted Capital Transit buses so they would avoid the grade crossing.

Connecticut Avenue Citizens Map Program

Newly elected officers yesterday began discussing the 1936 program of the Connecticut Avenue Association. The officers include: Carl A. Martin, president; Harry Kronheimer, first vice president; Alfred Pasternak, second vice president; John Rollins, secretary, and Luther Schreiner, treasurer.

One of Washington's most active business men's organizations, the association's membership includes business and professional men with offices within two blocks of Connecticut avenue between K street and Florida avenue northwest.

Capital Church Observes 50th Year at Dinner

With personal greetings from several of their former pastors, and written messages from others so far away as Berkeley, Calif., and Miami, Fla., 250 members of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church last night met for a fiftieth anniversary banquet.

The speakers included the Rev. Walter Amos Morgan, D. D., who left his pastorate here in 1925 to taken charge of a large Congregational church in Chicago; the Rev. Moses Richardson Lovell, who left Mount Pleasant Church five years ago for a pastorate at Waterbury, Conn., and another one later at Holyoke, Mass.; and the Rev. Frank J. Goodwin, D. D., who was pastor of the church when it celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary.

There were written felicitations from the Rev. Charles H. Small, former minister, now living in California, and from the Rev. Clarence A. Vincent, who now resides in Florida.

From all of these men, who played instrumental parts in building the church from a congregation of 19 charter members to one of the largest in the Capital, came reminiscing and words of well wishing.

Dr. Morgan Speaks on Past.

"You cannot cut off the past and live," declared Dr. Morgan in a talk on "Heritage of the Past."

"The future has its significance because of the past," he declared, "and in the church this past means fellowship—the fellowship on which you have built your congregation. It is an association of rich and abiding worth.

"That binding of people together into higher resolves is to bind them together in the discovery that life is an eternal work."

If the church has accomplished nothing but effecting such fellowship, it has proved its worth, said the postor.

Looking not to the past, but catching a "Vision of the Future" Mr. Lovell called upon the churchmen to build a spiritualism on the secularism that now engulfs the world.

"We are caught in an impasse," he said. "There are some religionists who say go back and develop anew the individual life, while others say preach a social religion. Religion, not knowing whether to strike inward or outward might seem doomed to failure.

"But I am an optimist. I am confident, because secularism, if left alone, germinates the seeds of its own undoing. Then, too, secularism has the seeds of its own spiritualism.

"I do not think that man will completely let go of his spirit. The secular world may flaunt its banners, but it will not triumph long. Man, sooner or later, is going to seek the realization of the fuller life he feels within him."

The Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, D. D., present minister of the church, was introduced as the last speaker on the banquet program. He made remarks on "Dedication to the Task."

At the beginning of the speech-making Arthur D. Call, church deacon, who was toastmaster, introduced two guests for greetings. They were Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, and the Rev. Paul R. Hunter, of the Washington Association of Congregational Churches.

Mary Apple, contralto, furnished the musical entertainment.

Pension Asked For Widows of U. S. Workers

Rep. Hope's Bill Would Pay $900 Yearly in Case of Death.

A bill designed to provide pensions for widows of active and retired employes of the Federal and District governments was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Hope (Republican), Kansas.

The measure would provide annuities of $900 for widows of employes who died in the service, providing the husband had been subject to the provisions of the civil service retirement act of 1930 for five years prior to his death.

To become eligible for the pension widows would have to have married the employe at least five years before his death and at the time of application for pension be not less than 35 years old.

Widows of retired Federal or District employes would be eligible to three-fourths of the pension received by their husbands or $900 a year, whichever is greater.

The pension would be paid the widow until her death or remarriage. If the widow had not received the full amount of the retirement fund which her husband had paid in before his death, the remainder would be paid her in lump sum upon remarriage or to the estate upon her death.

Financing of the widow pension is provided in a 5 per cent deduction of the basic pay of all married males in the Government service should the bill become a law and effective July 1, 1936.

The measure was referred to the House Civil Service Committee for consideration.

21 Defendants Go on Trial In Rum Case

9 Others Plead Guilty; One Dead, Another Released.

U. S. Charges $500,000 Tax Loss Through Conspiracy.

Twenty-one alleged post-repeal rum-ring conspirators went on trial in the District Supreme Court yesterday in what was described by the Government as the largest trial, in point of numbers, ever held in the court.

The number of defendants was materially reduced just before trial when nine others entered pleas of guilty, while still another was scratched off the list because of his recent death, and the remaining defendant in the original list of 34 men and women, was cleared when the Government dropped charges against him.

Henry Schweinhaut, assistant United States attorney in charge of the prosecution, painted a vivid picture of the allegedly extensive operations of the defendants. He said the Government would show the group was responsible for smuggling into Washington an average of from 5,000 to 10,000 gallons of alcohol a week. The prosecutor said, also he would demonstrate one of the members of the ring purchased almost 4,000,000 pounds of sugar within a "remarkably short time" although he was in no business and was a mere citizen. The sugar, he said, was used to make alcohol.

Defendant in Jail.

Much embarrassment was caused the Government yesterday when after repeated checks of the attending defendants, one, Frank Calvin Smith, was found missing. After a great deal of searching and much anxiety, he was found—of all places—safely ensconced in the District Jail. His absence brought about a two-hour delay in the trial.

Those who pleaded guilty yesterday were Henry Landry, John Thomas, William, Gilstrap, Henry Cornelius, Charles Richardson, Frank Guy, Harold Johnson, Blanche Thomas and Wendell Smith, all colored. Previously, Basil E. Johnson had admitted his guilt, while the name of Andrew Jackson was lopped off when it was shown he had died Robert Jones was given a "nolle prosse."

Those standing trial are Samuel Sloan Montgomery, Albert H. Smith, Joseph Samuel Bond, Arthur Bartolozzi Earl G. Funk, John Manoi, George F. Tear, Belford R. Longnecker, Leonard Smith, Lawrence J. Swann, Charles E. Hawkins, Clarence Eugene Ross, Cornelius Carter, Carroll Thomas, Corlis Sims, Julia Beck, Upton Dorsey, Frank Galvin Smith, Frank Newton, Raymond Hawkins and Gorman Wright.

Expect Long Trial.

They were represented by a battery of attorneys who strove unsuccessfully to keep Government employes off the jury. As the jury was allowed to stand, there were nine Government employes and a notary public on it, with two alternate jurors waiting to take the place of any member who is incapacitated. Justice F. Dickinson Letts, after admonishing the jury members not to talk about the case, or read the news stories concerning it, said he would permit the twelve men and two women to go to their homes because of the prospects for a month-long trial.

Five witnesses were heard yesterday. They were from the telephone company, the Maryland State Traffic Bureau, the District Traffic Bureau, and the Postal and Western Union Companies. All produced official data showing phone calls, automobile registrations and telegraphic money orders.

In outlining the case to the jury, Schweinhaut and Howard Boyd, another assistant United States Attorney, said the ring operated from a headquarters in the 1400 block of P street northwest, where a dummy, to a nearby retail liquor store. The unlisted phone had been connected store peddled illicit liquor obtained from P street quarters, on which the Government declared, no taxes were paid.

The loss to the Government was estimated at about $500,000 in uncollected taxes. The amount of business, it was said, was of such extent that the average daily loss in unpaid taxes ran to $2,000.

The slaying of Ernest Elmo Nelson, colored, in April, 1934, was revealed by Schweinahut as providing the "tip off" on the ring. Nelson's body was placed in a truck, hauled to nearby Maryland and dumped out, and a subsequent investigation of suspects accidentally led to the disclosure of the alleged conspiracy, which was affluent enough to wire $116,000 to a Trenton bootlegger within a few weeks, it was said.

Kiwanis Gives Holiday Party For Cripples

The kindly romantic shade of gay St. Valentine stole through the dingy windows of Weightman School for Crippled Children yesterday and attended the annual party being held in his honor by the Kiwanis Club.

Only a moment before he arrived, about 2 p. m., the youngsters had been immersed in their lessons. They weres tudying about Great Britain. They were drawing pictures of Sir Francis Drake's Golden Hind. They were studying arithmetic, too, and a tedious job it was, the day before St. Valentine's Day!

But when the democratic ghost of many a whimsy and frolic in the month of February put in an appearance, accompanied by Ed Hill, a trustee of Kiwanis International, and Charles W. Pimper, a member of the Washington club, schoolroom worries were forgotten.

So were the braces, thee rutches and the wheel chairs by which the 48 little victims victims of infantile paralysis who attend the school, must move about through life.

Hill brought with him George H. Small, a telephone company official, who is known as the "One-Man Band." Small strummed a banjo, strung around his shoulder, and tooted a harmonica.

First he played "There'll Be a Hot Time In the Old Town Tonight" and the children, when they heard how the Spanish-American War soldiers in blue marched to it, forgot they never would march. Then he played a little dance, and the classroom became a ballroom, and the children's imaginations spun around on it to the tempo of a jolly orchestra.

Sixteen-year-old Grace Vitality, the wonder girl, sang, and Hill presented Mrs. Beulah Drake, supervising teacher of the school, with an enormous cardboard heart from her 48 "goslings," her pupils.

Roberts Urged As Successor To Prettyman

Strong Backing Seen for People's Counsel; Others Listed.

The District Commissioners maintained silence yesterday on the selection of a successor to Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, whose resignation became effective March 15.

People's Counsel William A. Roberts is being strongly urged for the position, although he has taken no move to advance his candidacy.

Another candidate who has powerful local support is Elwood H. Seal, now an assistant corporation counsel.

Those who are reported to have urged Roberts for the post are Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee.

Roberts also has the support of the Federal Bar Association and other powerful backing on Capitol Hill.

Vernon E. West, now principal assistant to Prettyman, is being advanced for the post by District officials.

Others being mentioned are William McK. Clayton, chairman of the utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Ringgold Hart, former assistant corporation counsel, Jo Morgan, prominent attorney; Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter Fowler and H. Winship Wheatley, former president of the Dstirict Bar Association.

D.C. Concerns Ready to Seek Taxes Refund

Plan Anticipates Nullification of Law by Supreme Court.

Recovery of pay roll taxes paid under the District unemployment compensation act, if the social security act is invalidated by the Supreme Court, will be sought by local employers, who are paying the levy under protest.

From another source yesterday came a move to exempt 4,000 insurance agents from the provisions of the act, their employers contending that the agents are independent contractors. A hearing on this question will be held on February 24.

Invalidation of the Federal security act by the Supreme Court would not necessarily invalidate the District act, because of the peculiar relation between the Federal and District governments, attorneys said.

However, attorneys representing local employers have advised their clients to pay the tax under protest, so they might recover the money in the event the local act is invalidaed.

To date, 2,000 of the 18,000 employers affected by the act have made their payments. John A. Marshall, director of the local board, announced yesterday.

Total collections of pay roll taxes in the District will be $800,000 during this calendar year, Marshall estimates. Funds will be deposited in the United States Treasury until 1938, when payments under the act are to start.

Allocation of funds by the National Security Board is expected to be made in the next few weeks, at which time the District headquarters will be set up at 470 Louisiana avenue northwest.

The board yesterday recommended three amendments to the local act which would extend the secrecy of records to protect employes, would permit small employers to pay in tax stamps instead of cash, and would allow employers to spy on a fiscal week, as well as on a calendar week basis.

Senator Nye Sponsors Play Barred in Tourney

Senator Gerald P. Nye and Representatives Vito Marcantonio and Byron Scott will sponsor presentation of the play "Private Hicks" today at 8:30 p. m. at the National Press Club auditorium. This was the play which was banned from the annual one-act play tournament in the city.

Representative Scott is to speak at the performance. Members of the cast include David Goldfarb, Sam El, Valerie Deane, Alan Karlson, Nathan E. Sherman and Cy Whitehill.

Local Liquor Dispensers Must Try to Please Customers and Keep Within Law at Same Time

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Editor's note: Washington has 1,674 licensed liquor and beer dealers. In an effort to ascertain conditions prevailing since the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, The Post has assigned a reporter to accompany enforcement officers of the ABC Board on their daily tours of inspection. This is the second in a series of stories.

Washington's licensed liquor dealers—at least those operating cafes, night clubs and cocktail rooms—are faced with a difficult problem. It is up to them to cater to their patrons and at the same time obey regulations of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

It has been mentioned that Washington, under strict supervision by ABC enforcement officers, has become a model "repeal" city. But, to a great extent, credit is due the individual licensee. He knows his license to dispense beer, wines and liquor depends on his reputation.

He knows what it means to have complaints reach the ABC Board. He knows he will be "called on the carpet" for any indications of disorder or lawlessness around his place of business. He knows that conviction of a flagrant violation means loss of his license—and possibly his business.

With this in mind, the dealer must cope with many unusual situations. He must keep within the law and keep his patronage as well.

Typical Example.

During a recent tour with Officers Robert V. Murray and Winfred D. Young, ABC inspectors, we saw a typical example of this.

We were visiting a "dine and dance" cafe in Southeast Washington. The place is frequented by service men—sailors and soldiers from the Navy Yard and nearby air stations.

A nickel-in-the-slot" music machine was dispensing doleful tunes. The place was crowded. Liquor and beer glasses littered the tables. Loud talking added to the din of jazz and clattering dishes.

The door opened and a sailor came in. He was visibly intoxicated. The proprietor hastened to meet him. He had come to join some friends—soldiers ad sailors—who were seated at one of the tables.

Told Him to Leave.

The proprietor, however, told the sailor to leave.

"You are intoxicated. I cannot serve you or allow you to remain," the sailor was told.

An argument followed. The sailor was insistent and started to edge his way toward a table. The sailor's friends rose and attempted to convince the proprietor that their companion "was O. K."

Here was a problem typical of ones faced many, many times a night by liquor dealers throughout the city. The customers must be pleased and the law obeyed. This dealer's trade depended largely upon service men. To order this sailor out might mean the loss of patrons and business.

But there was nothing else for the proprietor to do. If he served the man—or even allowed him to remain—he faced the loss of his license and a heavy fine. The sailor went out and order was maintained. And it was all done with a few words. There were no "strong arm" methods used.

Other Types.

But there are other types of licensees operating in Washington. Our touring companions were seated one night in a northeast restaurant. It was "after hours" for liquor selling. They asked the proprietor (who didn't know them) for two bottles of beer. He brought the order, remarking:

"I hope you fellows ain't wearing badges—because I'm violating the law and taking an awful chance doing this."

Maryland Club Show Will Aid Cripple Fund

Benefit to Be Held Sunday; Another Lindsey Fete at Lotus Is Set.

By Chanticleer.

Maryland Club Garden's gracious Mrs. Stamm and Mrs. Ralph Sheffer have had their heads together for the last few days and now the news is ready. Sunday night is to be an event at the Gardens, an occasion which will be remembered by many youngsters who, no doubt, never have seen the inside of a smart supper club. And many who would not be able to have very much fun if they did go inside.

Mrs. Sheffer represents the Prince Georges branch of the Maryland League for Crippled Children. And Sunday night is benefit night—a dance with the proceeds going toward paying reconstruction charges for arms and legs crippled by infantile paralysis.

Mrs. Stamm has donted the use of the club's entire facilities.

I'm willing to bet that it will be the happiest, dancingest gang at the Gardens Sunday night that has filled an after-dark spot in many a day. You're invited.

It's another Earl Lindsey show at the Lotus this week, with eight beautiful young maidens backing up the list of principals headed by Lester and Daniels, specializing in a tango moderne. And there's Lois and Andre, too, in something new and different in South American boleros and one-steps. Rennie Reynolds features a rhythm strut and Bobby Mann and Eddie Mayo give you your tap routines . . . Jimmy Staley, Dude Ranch crooner, is odds-on favorite to receive the most valentines. Jimmy just seems to affect the gals that way. Anyway, he's entitled to them for there's been a tragedy in Staley's life; someone made himself a present of Jimmy's police dog . . . Marusia Sava is grabbing off a large chunk of the honors this week at the Russian Troika. The big hit song she sells is 'I Dreamed About a Garden," the Russian name being completely beyond my range of Russian understanding as of the moment . . . These Hawaiians, like the Chinese, are clever. When a bridal couple dropped into the Ambassador's Hi-Hat to say good-by to the Hi-Hat's manager, Frank McNey, the Hawaiians put their heads together and composed—and played—an original love song . . . Alexandria's Hotel George Mason is celebrating its tenth anniversary today—a Valentine Day gala event. Brooke Johns will be on hand to emmcee a big floor show including Happy Walker's Orchestra and Ray Francis' Orchestra, the Gypsy Duo, Pat and Blanche, John and Jerry . . . When Matt Windsor went to New York for Club Volga Boatman talent, he meant business. Now two new acts grace the floor productions: Nadia and Nathaska, in Russian character dances, and a whirlwind dancer, Val Romanoff. Consuelo Gonzales remains and Impresario Windsor features his delightful "Parade of the Wooden Soldier." . . . Marya and Martyn are the featured artists at Pete Macias' Club Heigh-Ho, with appearances nightly. And don't forget the Tap Room's Sunday night informal gatherin' with the Macias trio . . . It's College Night tonight at La Paree . . . The Shoreham stages a wedding sequence from a real scenario tonight when the regular Movie Night goes dramatic. This cellophane business (the scene is in cellophane costumes) is alluring and all that sort of thing, according to advance reports. Washington society girls will participate, costumes created by Maud Murlig, of Hollywood. And, of course, last week's pictures will be shown. Music by Barnee and his orchestra and swell dancing by the Britishers, Seymour and Eleanor Royce . . . Al Sakol, one of Sidney's sax tooters, filled in for 40 seconds at WRC the other day when a banned number had to be cut from a transcription and a live artist substituted playing something else. To be specific, Al tooted "Sailing" on his saxophone. You should know by this time that Sidney and the Mayflower lounge are virtually synonymous . . . Al Yurdin, of Sidney's extensive stable of musicians, is accompanying Tito Guizar in his WRC broadcasts. Apparently when in need of music, call Sidney.

On the Air Today

And in its place comes "The Ziegfeld Follies" as a weekly presentation, same stations, same hour.

A lot of money has been laid on the line for the use of the Ziegfeld name. And a lot more is being paid the current "Follies" star, Fanny Brice, for her services in the new weekly series. And no small amount, no doubt, further goes to pay James Melton, Patti Chapin and Al Goodman and his orchestra for their supporting talents.

The "Follies" of the air will be a musicomedy with a serialized setting, a backstage story of human interest involving Alice Moore, a little usher who wants to become a "Follies" star.

Miss Brice is to be featured as a singer, her comedy characterization of Baby Snooks, and possibly other roles.

It all begins February 22.

The where and whyfore of Valentine's Day is to be fully explained through the dramatization of the life of St. Valentine by the Ava Maria Radio League, WOL, at 7:30. The custom of Valentine's Day is probably pagan in origin—and Valentine himself, poor fellow, was beheaded about the year 270 for no better reason than that he was a Christian in the reign of Claudius II. And February 14 has been remembered to this day for that reason.

Boake Carter's discussion of "Radio and the Public" tonight will be with James A. Farley, WJSV, at 10:45. Just the name Farley is enough to merit special mention in this small space. Farley is a political name. And mention of it should spare slaves in the employ of newspapers and radio stations many telephone calls from persons who would believe that the program went unmentioned for some ridiculous, insidious reason.

The Maybelle Jennings-Arthur Godfrey "column-of-the-air" periods are being jiggered about due to the Boake Carter discussions on at WJSV. The new schedule: Godfrey: Tuesday and Friday at 6:30; Miss Jennings, Thursday and Saturday, same hour.

WOR advises that Harold West is playing "Doctor Watson" in the new Sherlock Holmes series over the Mutual net. Leigh Lovel, the original Watson, is dead. My own opinion is that the illusion is perfect, almost incredible. The similarity of voices and characterizations is fascinating. However, as reported in this space a few days ago, Holmes and Mr. Bell are played by the same actors as in the preceding series.

Ickes Opens Unit's First Session Here

Secretary of the Interior Ickes yesterday opened the first meeting of his newly appointed Advisory Board on National Parks, Historic Sites, Buildings and Monuments.

Dr. Herman C. Bumpus, of Duxbury, Mass., was elected permanent chairman of the board, and Dr. Frank Gastler, of New York City, was elected secretary. Dr. Waldo G. Leland, of Washington, is among the members of the board.

In his opening address to the board Secretary Ickes expressed his satisfaction with the legislation, which made the board possible, and his pleasure that this should have happened during his term of office.

The board will continue its meeting today to discuss its work and make plans for comprehensive action under the new legislation.

$12-Week Waitress Scorns Any Alimony

Scoring alimony for herself or maintenance for her 4-year-old child, Mrs. Ruth N. Steele, attractive 19-year-old waitress, yesterday told Justice Oscar R. Luhring in District Supreme Court she did not desire any financial help from her husband, although her salary is only $12 a week.

Mrs. Steele, who was the first to file for an absolute divorce under the District's recently liberalized statute, was awarded a divorce from James Steele on the grounds of desertion. Her attorney, Jean M. Boardman, filed her suit August 7, 1935, within a few hours of the time when President Roosevelt affixed his signature to the law.

Waiter Seized For Betraying Nazis' Secrets

50 Members of Reich's Navy Reported Arrested in Espionage Plot.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 13.—The arrest of a waiter charged with attempting to betray secrets of Germany's naval rearmament was disclosed tonight as the Nazi government pushed its campaign against "enemies of the state."

The Reich war ministry said it had no knowledge of the reported arrests of 50 members of the navy in connection with an espionage plot.

(A dispatch from Copenhagen, Denmark, quoted the newspaper Heimdal, published near the German frontier, as saying 50 persons in the Reich's navy were arrested at Flensburg, a city in Prussia, on espionage charges.)

(A waiter, the newspaper said, who formerly was a member of the French secret service, was called the leader of the plot to secure naval secrets from Schleswig bases.)

Investigation in Flensburg disclosed a waiter was arrested there about four weeks ago by the secret police on a high treason charge. Naval men, it was said, denounced him to police for trying to secure information.

He was taken to Leipzig for trial and meanwhile officials declined to give his name or say in whose interests he is charged with serving.

Although the utmost reticence concerning the extent of anti-Catholic action in the Rhineland was still observed in both official and Catholic circles, it was learned that Prelate Banasch, an associate of the Bishop of Berlin, who was arrested November 24, still is held in custody without any definite charge brought against him.

Prelate Banasch was chief of the Catholic information bureau. At the time of his arrest Nazi authorities swooped down on Rhineland Catholic youth centers and closed them, and thereafter there were desultory arrests of youth leaders.

Officials insisted that recent raids against Catholics in the Rhineland and arrests were connected with an attempt to revive communistic activities.

Significant in the movement was the announcement that the Gestapo, secret state police, would give orders to district governors from now on.

United Food Stores To Open Exposition

A series of contests, featuring such participants as babies, imitators of radio and screen performers, large families and tap dancers, will be one of the high lights at the annual exposition of the United Food Stores, scheduled to open Saturday night in Calvert Hall, 2700 Calvert street northwest, for a week's stand.

Baby contests will be held daily, the first getting under way Monday at a matinee which begins at 2:30 o'clock. Individual classes for babies of various ages, ranging from 6 months to 4 years, will be held. A grand finale, at which the "best baby" in the show will be picked, will be staged on the closing night, February 22.

At the opening exercises Saturday night at 8 o'clock, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Judge Robert E. Mattingly and Isaac Gans are listed to make brief talks. Morris Kraft, president of United Food Stores, and David Hornstein, counsel, will make introductory remarks.

The show, an annual affair, is sponsored by 135 members of the United Food organization, and approximately 70 independent dealers.

Atlas Building Trustees Are Sued for $30,000

Trustees for the Atlas Building, Ninth and F streets northwest, were sued for $30,000 in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Mrs. Anna Marie Papst, 619 Oneida place northwest, and her husband, Josef Papst, on the allegation Mrs. Papst was permanently injured last September when an elevator in which she was riding fell two floors.

Attorneys A. L. Newmyer and David G. Bress representing Mr. and Mrs. Papst, claimed the building trustees, Thomas M. Gittings, Alexander C. Robeson and Goodwin Graham, should be held responsible for the elevator's fall.

Auto Taxes Last Year Reached 1.3 Billions

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Taxation of motor vehicles in the United States reached a new high in 1935 of about $1,300,000, William J. Gottlieb, of the New York Automobile Club, announced today.

This represents an average tax of $50 on everyone of the 26,000,000 vehicles registered, he said.

U. S. Hockeyists Defeat Sweden, 2-1, to Gain Olympic Finals

3 More Titles To Norway, Germany

Only Other Points Made by Americans Are in Skating Events.

Norwegians, Near Lead, Seem Certain to Win Team Laurels.

By Gayle Talbot,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

GARMISH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany, Feb. 13.—The two top-ranking nations of the fourth winter Olympic games, Germany and Norway, garnered three more championships today as Canada suffered another major hockey reverse, this time on the convention floor.

The United States ice hockey team advanced to the final round of the Olympic competition tonight, defeating Sweden, 2 to 1, for its third straight victory in the current round-robin series.

Completing the second round, Canada trounced Germany, 6 to 2; England defeated Hungary, 5 to 1, and Czechoslovakia turned back Austria, 2 to 1.

Germany in Lead.

After Norway had picked up 35 points in the skating championship and the combination ski cross country-jumping event, and taken a temporary lead, Germany bounced back to the top of the unofficial team rankings when Maxie Herber and Ernest Baier captured the pairs figure skating crown.

Although the point totals tonight showed Germany in front by a dwindling margin, 107 to 105, there was every prospect that Norway would capture the team honors for the first time since 1928.

With the redoubtable Sonja Henie favored to retain the women's figure skating crown and Norse skiers and skaters almost certain to dominate the remaining events in their specialties, Norway seems to hold the winning cards in this unofficial phase of the winter games.

There is no official team "title" in the Olympics, however. Various point-scoring methods are used, according to national standards.

The United States was well down the list with 15½ points. The chances of a single triumph for the Americans have dwindled.

Canada suffered a terrific blow to its hopes of a fourth successive Olympic hockey championship when a motion for revision of the rules governing the final round robin series was voted down, 6 to 2. Only Canada and Germany supported the proposal.

Can't Avenge Defeat.

This action means that Canada's stunning 2-1 setback by England, in the second round-robin seriesh, will be charged against the Dominion in the finals. Under the rules, finalists who have met in a previous round are not required to play each

Without Shirley Povich.

By Dave Herman.

HERMAN.

One has to admire Dempsey for all the energy he is putting out in search of a "white hope." This is a noble gesture on his part, but it seems to us that the Manassa Mauler has made little headway. Joe Louis is the best heavyweight since Dempsey and Tunney laid aside their gloves, and there isn't a fighter in captivity who can touch him with a 10-foot pole.

As a matter of fact, after he butchers up the "Joisey Kid," James J. Braddock, present champion, Louis is destined to rule the heavyweights for many years. Young, strong enough to juggle a couple of pianos, posessor of a punch that could blow up a battleship, and improving with each fight, the sloe-eyed, icy-nerved Brown Embalmer will find that his future opponents—at least for the next six or seven years—will be fit subjects for the Louis chopping block before the bell for the sixth round sounds.

Joe Louis has yet to reach his peak—surely a bad sign for all these "white hopes," and Braddock. Schmeling and other veteran sockers. Today he is like the young Dempsey who roared out of the West just before he sent his fists thundering at the jaws of Jess Willard.

But, if Louis is only good now, and his sensational charge during the last year has left in its wake bleary-eyed, wobbly victims of his poisonous punch, what, then, are we to expect of the lithe-limbed smokestack when he reaches the zenith of his power?

Surely, the man is a killer, a veritable King Kong. He is not human.

My friend, Joe Turner, Washington's boxing impresario, disagrees with me on one point. I tried to explain to Joe that Braddock wouldn't last three rounds with Louis, and Daddy Joe, all hot in the head, ups and says:

"Braddock is the only man who's got a chance with Louis. I saw Jim get up from the canvas and beat Corn Griffin. I saw 'im take the wind out of Maxie Baer's sails with some of the finest two-fisted punching any heavyweight championship bout has produced.

"Braddock's the only heavy today who has a right hand powerful enough to keep Louis worried for 15 rounds. Now, don't get me wrong. I wouldn't say that Braddock will win, but I think he's got a helluva a good chance."

Gentlemen, put that in your book. It comes from Daddy Joe, who knows his fighters like a bartender knows his toddies.

Of course, they're keeping us in suspense by holding off the Braddock-Louis fight. Schmeling's to fight Louis in June, and we shall get a better idea of what to expect in the Braddock-Louis battle, which may come about next fall. Or maybe it won't take place until next year, for it's a cinch Louis will be the new champion. (Maybe Bill McCormick, who likes everything, doesn't think so.)

In the meantime, you will read much about the daring escapades of such hopefuls as Al Delaney, a good-looking prospect; Red Burman, Joe Lipps, Buddy Baer, Max Marek and Eddie Mader. But they have as much chance of winning as "One-Eye" Connelly has of crashing the White House.

From merrie ole England comes Jock McAvoy, a fair-to-middlin' light-heavy, who, I am told by some New York experts, has a "punch in the making."

The basketball merry-go-round continues. In New York Ned Irish packs 'em in the Garden with his double-decker Saturday night programs. He's making enough dough to keep Barbara Hutton in bon bons. In Philadelphia they're enjoying success with these double-headers. High-class college teams are the magnet, just as they are the attraction in football. Yes, sir, basketball's a-coming. Soon there won't be a place large enough to hold the crowds.

It seems to us that some smart promoter could do the same thing in Washington. Haven't got a place large enough—you say? Well, you can pack 5,000 into Tech High. What's wrong with a meeting between N. Y. U. and George Washington, Georgetown and Notre Dame—on the same night at Tech.

George Washington, now using the Reinhart system—very effective, too—has a squad that is a far cry from its teams of yesteryear. Defeated only by Ohio State, which in turn suffered its worst defeat at the hands of the Colonials, G. W. is Olympic timber. Make no mistake about that. General opinion following Georgetown's sensational victory over N. Y. U. last Friday night was that the Colonials could outscore the Violets by 15 points. Of course, that's a broad statement, but that's once we know whereof we speak.

Georgetown, playing in-and-out basketball, really has one of the best teams in the East. Just rounding into form, the Hoyas gave convincing p[illegible] that they've got what it takes by cutting down N. Y. U.—the Nation's No. 1 team—and West Virginia. Georgetown's 1937 team—that is what you want to watch, eh, Freddie Mesmer?

Maybe we're wrong, but it would seem that an annual tournament featuring District colleges wouldn't be a bad stunt. Play it at Tech in round-robin fashion. Georgetown, Maryland, Catholic University, George Washington, Wilson Teachers and Gallaudet.

Oh, so you don't like that idea. Well, take it away.

Tech Victory Forfeited to Roosevelt

Rough Riders Are Given Undisputed Possession of Second Place.

| | Won | Lost | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Eastern | 7 | 0 | 1.000 |
| Roosevelt | 4 | 3 | .571 |
| Western | 3 | 4 | .429 |
| Tech | 2 | 5 | .285 |
| Central | 1 | 5 | .167 |

By John R. Vosburgh.

TECH HIGH yesterday forfeited an inter-high basketball game to Roosevelt High, thereby shoving the Rough Riders into undisputed possession of second place in the inter-high series and simultaneously killing Tech's chances of finishing in the runner-up berth to Eastern and of playing in the South Atlantic Interscholastic Championships at Richmond.

A belated discovery showing that Jimmy Vermillion, Tech's frolicking forward, was ineligible when Tech trounced Roosevelt, 45 to 25, Tuesday, caused the forfeiture. Principal Frank A. Daniel, of Tech, officially forfeited the victory to Principal Allen Davis, of Roosevelt, who had no alternative but to accept it.

Comes as Severe Blow.

The whole incident comes as a severe blow to Teach's coach, Rutsy Thompson, and his team. An invitation to the South Atlantic championships virtually hinges on winning second place and Tech was headed full tilt toward the No. 2 berth.

Both Coach Thompson and Lawrence E. Brown, Tech's faculty adviser, believed Vermillian eligible when the game was played. This fact failed to alter Principal Daniel's stand, however, who somehow or other, was mysteriously notified of Vermillion's status in a certain history course.

When the game was played Vermillion was actually not deficient in his hsitory course but was ineligible because he had a "withheld mark" in it previously. Coach Thompson had kept the player out of the game against Western several days previously because Vermillion had not made up the "withheld mark."

Believed Eligible.

By the time the Roosevelt game took place, however, he had made up an exam in the course, qualifying him to play in the opinion of Coach Thompson and Brown, who is president of the Interhigh Athletic Association. Brown's authority, however, was overruled by Daniel, who pointed out that a player having a "withheld mark" at at any time cannot be made eligible again that semester.

Coach Herman Littman of Roosevelt said he regretted winning a game in such a manner. Nobody seems to know who discovered that Vermillion was technically ineligible, although it is certain it was a Tech individual. The logical solution of the problem, so far as an innocent bystander is concerned, would have been to disqualify Vermillion for future games only since the breach had not been discovered until after he had played and Brown, faculty adviser, had believed the boy eligible.

Fighter Held in Death.

San Francisco, Feb. 13 (AP).—Lorenzo (Pete) Pedro, 21-year-old professional fighter, was booked on a technical charge of manslaughter today after the death of his sparring partner, Eddie Kimm, 24.

Kimm died yesterday in a hospital after collapsing in the ring from a blow under the heart. The two San Franciscans were both wearing the big 12-ounce training gloves.

U. S. Won't Protest British Hockeyists

By the United Press.

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 13.—America has not and will not protest Britain's use of two former Canadians on its Olympic ice hockey team, Avery Brundage, head of the American Olympic committee and president of the A. A. U., said today.

The players, Alex Archer and James Foster, were suspended before the ice hockey started because they had transferred from Canada to England without first receiving Canadian permission. Later they were reinstated and have played in every game for Britain.

Brundage denied there was a heated session last week when the International Ice Hockey Federation voted unanimously to reinstate Foster and Archer.

Miss Dettweiler Reaches Golf Semifinals

By the Associated Press.

NASSAU, Bahamas, Feb. 13.—Making her best showing since she joined the national women stars in the winter golfing campaign, Helen Dettweiler, young Washington, D. C., entry, entered the semifinals of the British Colonial women's golf tournament today, defeating Mrs. Sally Sterrett, of Hutchinson, Kans., 2 and 1.

Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, Mo., medalist, advanced easily, eliminating Mrs. E. F. Devilbiss, another Kansas entry, 7 and 5.

Wins by Default.

Defaults accounted for the consolation flight victories of Mrs. H. B. Kirkpatrick, of Atlanta, over Mrs. Frank Wattles, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Helen Edgecomb, of Philadelphia, over Mrs. Robert C. Greenlease, of Kansas City; Mrs. O. B. Keeler, of Atlanta, over Mrs. Charles Calladay, of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Sanders Shanks, of Brightwater, Long Island, over Mrs. Richard Jarrett, of Philadelphia.

Jockey Spears Is Buried in His Silks

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 13.—Homer H. Spears, jr., 17, Cleveland, Ohio, apprentice jockey whose ambition to win cost him his life in a four-horse spill Monday at the Fair Grounds, was buried today with simple but striking ceremony.

Neatly groomed in flashy riding silks, six jockeys who vied daily with young Spears for track honors, lowered the flower-laden casket into a grave as 2,500 followers of the sport looked on.

Wears Grand's Colors.

The jockey, who rode for all he was worth, was buried in the gold and cerise silks of Frank Grand, owner and trainer.

His little 90-pound body was crushed under a heap of falling thoroughbreds on the stretch Monday after he had tried to shoot his mount through a narrow opening in an effort to overtake the leader.

Two of the other three jockeys involved in the spill attended the services. Francis Polk, leading Fair Grounds rider, remained in a serious condition from a probable skull fracture and brain concussion.

1,500 Brave Storm; See Cox Win

Kansas City Wrestler Throws Joe Dusek in 38 Minutes.

Grunt Foes Spend Most of Their Time Bobbing On and Off Mat.

By George Considine.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED spectators last night braved one of the stormiest nights of the year to see Kansas City Joe Cox body-slam Joey Dusek into oblivion after 38 minutes of uninterrupted slugging in the feature match of the weekly wrestling show at the Turner Arena.

The match was exceptoinal in that not one official wrestling hold was brought into play by either man throughout the nearly 40 minutes of action. Both men spent their time bringing 'em up from the floor, except, of course, the time spent lolling in the laps of the ringsiders.

Cox Turns Tables.

Having taken many gougings and strangles from Dusek during the first 15 minutes, Cox turned the tables and administered more than his share of strangles and roundhouse wallops. Turn about is fair play, regardless of how foul, to paraphrase an old saying.

Dusek then varied the slugging by rubbing grease in Cox's eyes. When a towel was proffered to wipe the tormented eyes, Little Joey used it to cut off Cox's wind. That done, Cox proceeded to cut off Dusek's wind in a similar manner. It was tit for tat again.

On one occasion Cox tied Dusek up in the ropes. And he did an elegant job of it, too, because it took the concerted efforts of Referee Bennah Bortnick, one of Maj. Brown's minions and Cox to extricate him.

Well, the boys lapsed into an exchange of kicks in the mush, followed by an exchange of body slams. Dusek didn't get up finally and Bortnick counted him out. And that was that.

Hall, Westcoatt Draw.

Lereing Len Hall and Rusty Westcoatt worked to a brisk 30-minute draw, which found the latter gent much worse for his labors. It seems that Rusty managed to knock himself out 5 minutes before the end as he fell out of the ring and it was all Hall could do to stall for the remaining time.

In the curtain-hoister, which lasted 13 minutes, Jim Wallis, former Holy Cross grid star, defeated Stolid Stan Sokolis for reasons unaccountable.

Baer in Workout; May Fight Again; Hoffman Says 'No'

By the Associated Press.

OAKLAND, Calif., Feb. 13.—Max Baer, former heavyweight champion, worked out in a gymnasium today for half an hour and announced he "might make a comeback."

Max said he intended to work out for about a week. Then if he is satisfied with his condition, he will pitch in for another whirl in the padded ring, he said.

From his Fair Oaks Ranch, Ancil Hoffman, manager of Baer during his important bouts, said he "thought Max would not fight again."

Baer retorted: "Hoffman is my friend, but not my manager. I only hire him to advise me."

Fights Tonight

BOBBY RAWSON,

Columbus U.'s Boxing Team Faces King

Powerful Visitors Boast Record Unmarred Since 1932.

KING COLLEGE'S regal cloutters, the toughest band of fighters to emerge from Dixie since the Civil War's close—according to press reports—square off with the battling barristers of Columbus University tonight at Turner's Arena in the lone collegiate activity scheduled here tonight. The opening gong will ring at 8:30 o'clock.

Undefeated since 1932, and victorious over Tennessee, Miami and Hampden-Sydney thus far this season, King will sorely try the Navigators' mettle, a mettle that withstood Miami's blistering test in their first match of the season. It will be a battle royal, too, if the presence of champion amateur ringmen counts for anything, for both teams boast a lavish assortment of Golden Gloves title holders.

21 Knockouts in Row.

King's outstanding mittman is Capt. Lew Summers, 118-pounder, who has collected an impressive string of 21 consecutive knockouts since donning the padded gloves. His victims include men not only in his own class but in the 125-pound division.

Perhaps even better and more widely publicized than Summers is Bill Wilkinson, ace lightweight who will meet Capt. Leon Shub in what appears to be the feature bout of the match. Wilkinson is Seaboard Golden Gloves champion at his weight, a title he has held for two years. He, too, is undefeated, and is reckoned one of the South's best college fighters.

The teams are pretty evenly matched in everything including coaches, since both Bob Goldstein, Columbus mentor, and Jeb Kelly, King instructor, are products of Johnny LaRowe's University of Virginia teams.

On Even Footing.

Both have imparted the uppercut, a la Cavalier, to their charges, so the boys will be on even footing in this respect at least.

Columbus will rely on the same team that successfully launched the campaign two weeks ago in pounding out a 4½-to-3½ decision over the tourists from Miami.

The line-ups:

| Columbus. | Wgt. | King |
|---|---|---|
| Morse | 118 | Summers |
| Peterson | 126 | Peruson |
| Shub | 135 | H. Wilkinson |
| Rawson | 145 | R. Wilkinson |
| Desch | 155 | Caldwell |
| Grimm | 165 | Savage |
| McKinney | 175 | Bruhaker |
| Wolf | Hvywgt. | Gavlock |

Horse Racing Is Voted by Va. House

Bill Provides Proposed Track Must Have Public's Approval.

Sunday Sports Measure Also Wins Backing of Delegates.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 13.—The House of Delegates, in a liberal mood, today voted to legalize horse racing, pari-mutuel betting and Sunday sports while the Senate refused to engross the Parker bill to prohibit the sale of beer on Sunday.

Horse racing enthusiasts were not quite ready to cry "they're off," however, for the bill passed, 45 to 41, and the companion measure, establishing a racing commission, providing how the races are to be held and for regulation of tracks, required 51 votes because of an appropriation feature and is still pending on the calendar.

Daughton Confident.

Ralph Daughton, Delegate from Norfolk, and principal sponsor of the 25-patron bill, expressed confidence that the companion bill would pass and said there was enough support for the 14 members not voting today to pass the measure. It was uncertain when it would be voted upon because of special orders.

The bill legalizing horse racing and pari-mutuel betting provides that no track shall be established until approved by a majority vote of citizens of a locality, such election to be called on petition of 250 voters.

Still on Calendar.

The measure limiting the length of the season to 100 days, with not more than 40 days to one track, and making other regulations for the conduct of the "sport of kings," is still on the House calendar.

The Edwards-Robinsin bill, which permits city councils to authorize Sunday baseball, football, golf and other sports, except wrestling and boxing, regardless of whether players are paid and admission is charged, passed, 54 to 19, after an amendment by Delegate John W. Morrison, of Harrisonburg, to have it apply to cities of the second class as well as cities of the first class.

Only One Out of Fold.

Chicago, Feb. 13 (AP).—Southpaw Pitcher Larry French sent in his signed 1936 contract to the Chicago Cubs today, leaving only Augie Galan, star young outfielder, still unsigned.

French, obtained from the Pittsburgh Pirates at the close of the 1934 season, won 17 and lost 10 for the champions last season.

70,000 Olympic Fans Crush, Push, Look On

By Paul Gallico.

GARMISCH - PARTENKIRCHEN, Feb. 13.—These twin towns went completely haywire today, the occasion being the ski-jump competition in the ski stadium and the pair skating in the ice stadium. Seventy thousand spectators poured into Garmisch and everything was terrifically complicated by the presence of Nazi bigwigs at both shows, morning and afternoon.

There was a near-panic at the entrance to the ice stadium in the afternoon. Women were crushed and trampled trying to get into the stadium. The uncontrolled crush of humanity at the entrance finally smashed the gate and thousands poured through. There was no attempt to take tickets. The German organization seemed to collapse completely as 20,000 persons attempted to enter the stadium which was built to accommodate 10,000 figure-skating spectators.

The spectators later found themselves locked in the stadium, ringed by soldiers and police. No one was permitted to depart while Chancellor Adolf Hitler was still there. Guests and newspapermen attempting to depart were barred by the soldiery. The streets to the stadium were lined ten deep with people craning their necks to see Hitler. Press passes were unhonored, so in order to get out I scaled a 12-foot fence. I felt like an escaped prisoner.

The same condition prevailed at the ski stadium in the morning. Eight thousand jammed in to see Hitler, who remained there for lunch. The people stayed, too, for 90 minutes. It was impossible to get out. The narrow streets of the town were jammed all day long with traffic of cars and enormous buses.

There was a throng of pedestrians on the sidewalks. Thousands were carrying skis on their shoulders and there always was danger of getting

Entries for Post-A. A. U. Basketball Tourney to Close Tonight

Last-Minute Flurry Is Expected

Midnight Is Deadline for A.A.U. Event; G-Men Have Two Teams.

ENTRIES for the District A. A. U. basketball championships which The Post will sponsor at Heurich's gym, will close tonight at midnight at the Boys' Club of Washington, 230 C street northwest.

It is important that all teams in the 100-pound, 115-pound, 130-pound, 145-pound, men's and girls' unlimited classes have their entries and registrations in the hands of the A. A. U. committee when the clock bangs 12. Chairman Winfree Johnson will not accept entries after midnight—the deadline.

Miss Maude Parker, who has been in charge of the girls games, has requested challenges in that division to file their entries with her at the District Building, room 313. Of course, those feminine teams which desire to sign up at the Boys' Club, may do so. However, Miss Parker prefers to have the girls register with her at the District Building.

Bertolini Official Scorer.

Teams within a 15-mile radius of Washington are eligible to compete for the trophies, gold and silver medals which The Post is donating. The A. A. U. is anxious to enlist the support of out-of-town teams in nearby Virginia and Maryland.

Chairman Johnson yesterday appointed Joe Bertolini as official scorer for the games, with Bill Royer as assistant. Harry (the Doc) Piddesopn, who has been trainer at The Post games for quite a while, has been assigned the same duties by Chairman Johnson. The referees will be selected tomorrow.

No alarm was occasioned when the committee reported that only about 25 teams had sent in their entries yesterday. It is an old-fashioned custom with the teams to wait until the last day, sometimes the last minute, and then rush down in time to escape the deadline.

The big surprise of the day was the announcement from Boys' Club headquarters that the Bureau of Investigation had entered two complete teams, of ten men, each. One will be known as the G-Men Blues and the other G-Men Whites. The Sleuths have some nine former college captains and ten former stars available.

Committee members are agreed that the unlimited talent is the finest in the ten-year history of The Post event.

one's nogging knocked off by the lengthy bed slats. The crush at the railway station was impassable and the restaurants were packed. It was impossible to get a meal except to snatch a sausage from a street vender. There was no evidence of the promised field kitchens to feed the thousands.

The only way to get from one event to another at the opposite ends of the town was on foot at a snail's pace. A still worse jam is expected Sunday when the big ski jump contest and the closing ceremonies may bring 125,000 to Garmisch.

The games are going into the homestretch now and the curious Olympic winter sport frenzy here is growing more intense.

Much Ceremony.

The pair figure skating contest was marked by much ceremony. Each pair taking the ice had to face Chancellor Hitler's tribunal, raise their right arms, then about-face to the opposite stand and again raise the right arm.

I can't say whether this was the Olympic or Nazi salute, but Hitler, clad in civilian clothes, returned each one, with sometimes the Olympic and sometimes the Nazi type of salute, the Americans included. The ceremony apparently was agreed upon for all before the start—although the Czechs apparently gave no salute. The whole thing seemed unimportant to me, but made a pretty picture.

Maribel Vinson, of Boston, was the best of the American pair skaters, though her partner, George E. B. Hill, also of Boston, skated badly and Maribel seemed peeved. They landed in fifth place.

Germans Are First.

The German pair, Ernst Baier and Maxie Herber, well known to American carnival audiences, skated a magnificent ice ballet to especially composed music and won first honors. The sensation of the afternoon was the Austrian pair, brother and sister kids, named Pausin, whose work brought cheers which even eclipsed the Herber-Baier reception.

My growing impression is that the audience is not particularly cordial or interested in the Americans. The applause is perfunctory, always, what we call a cold audience. The Austrians, Norsemen, English and French are popular here, but I guess they don't love Uncle Samuel so much since his dollar ain't what it used to be. It is possible also it is the reaction to our Olympic-A. A. U. fuss before the departure of our teams. It is also possible that the Americans are just another guy named Joe.

We also were no bargain in the combination ski jump. The ski stadium was a magnificent sight this morning during the jump. It seemed the entire mountain was black with people. Hitler, Air Minister Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, and a bevy of big shots were in the center of the balcony.

The bright sun was warm at the end of the contest. Seventy thousand throats roared out the famous ski heil greeting to the skiers of all nations, fairly shaking the ground.

Hog-Calling Farmer Dean 'Tells Off' On Himself and Famed Brother Diz

By Felix R. McKnight,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

GARLAND, Tex., Feb. 13.—Farmer Paul (Daffy) Dean, one of Dallas County's better hog-callers, releases the startling fact that his brother, the redoubtable Dizzy Dean, "ain't a bit better than he was seven seasons ago."

"Shucks," quoth Farmer Dean, tossing corn to three grunting hogs, "he had the same stuff when he was pitching in an Army league down in San Antonio.

"Honest, I watched him pitch then and he had the same old number 2 ball and that fast one. He's had it all the time—it just took him a little time to get to the big leagues."

Farmer Dean cupped two hamlike hands, screamed "pig-e-e, pig-e-e," and brought a farmhand and a tenant—and some hogs—running around the corner of the barn, and told off on himself.

"I was playing second base on a sandlot team in San Antonio in 1930. One day the pitcher got knocked out of the box. My team sorta elected me to pitch the rest of the game. I did—and I pitched the rest of the games that season."

Over his minor league history—the brilliant start with Houston in the Texas League and quick step into the big time—he skipped. He swung atop a plow, "giddaped" a team of mules and commented:

"You know, I don't believe I'm as popular as Diz with the fans. He knows how to get around. He always knows what to say. They don't catch old Diz without an answer. I just let him do the talkin' for us."

Paul predicted a great season for the Dean Mound Corp.—providing they come to terms. He wants more money than last year's salary and admitted that "I almost didn't sign any contract at all last year."

It took persuasion and money to get his name on a contract after he reported for spring training, he disclosed.

Paul called attention to his hogs, cows, sheep, mules, rich earth and pasture lands, announced plans for remodeling and then switched to golf talk.

A slice, worse than any curve he ever whipped across the corner of a home plate, has him a trifle worried, but he expects to iron it out "so it'll at least stay on the course."

He tossed another ear of corn at the hogs and said:

"Say, how about 18 holes now?"

Pausing from his farm duties down in Dallas County, Tex., Brother Paul Dean tells of how ol' Diz was just as good a pitcher seven years ago as he is now and that he (Paul) was "elected" to pitch by his teammates the first time he ever did mound duty with a San Antonio sandlot team in 1930. Paul allows Diz is more popular than he with the fans because "they don't catch ol' Diz without an answer."

Cool Is Signed After 3-Year Effort

5th Ranking Lightweight to Make D. C. Debut Against Scott.

EDDIE COOL, the Philadelphia fist clipper, who has been signed for a ten-round bout against Cowboy Howard Scott at Turner's Arena next Monday night, is one of the highest-ranking lightweights yet to show in the Capital. Eddie, who has conquered Harry Dublinsky, Frankie Klick, Tony Falco, Johnny Jadick and many others, is ranked fifth among the 135-pounders.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who is responsible for bringing Cool here, has been trying to sign the crowd-pleasing little Irishman for some three years—and during those three years Eddie has been marching steadily ahead in his weight division. Ahearn just happened to make one more try for Cool's services at a time when Eddie had nothing immediately in prospect and thus was able to bring him here.

Fought Twice This Year.

In 1935 alone Cool scored over Mickey Serrian, Benny Bass, Georgie Gibbs, Tony Morgano, Charley Gomer and Al Casimini. So far this year he has fought twice, losing a close decision to Wesley Ramey, considered by many a better lightweight than Champion Tony Canzoneri.

Scott, an importation from Texas, has only recently succeeded in reaching his peak form here. He demonstrated his ability by soundly trouncing California Joe Rivers, a local favorite, in Baltimore a few weeks ago. When he first reached Washington, Scott weighed only 124½ pounds, a figure way below his normal fighting poundage. For the Rivers fight, Howard weighed 131 and he is expected to tip the beam at more than 135 pounds against Cool.

30 Stars Nominated For Trial With Nats

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE last of the city's young sandlot baseball stars having a chance of being sent South by The Washington Post for a free try-out with the Nationals have been named. The Industrial and National City "A" and "B" Leagues yesterday concluded the player nominations which have now reached a total of 30 whom The Post must consider in making its selection.

Two pitchers, two catchers and two infielders comprise the nominees of the three circuits. The teams represented by the six selected players include the Blue Flame Valets, Heurich Brewers, Southwest Market, Miller Furniture, Warwick A. C. and Capital Transit.

The nominations were made as follows:

Industrial League.
(Nominated by President E. W. (Bill) Flester.)

Lyman McAvoy—21-year-old former University of Maryland star; hit .340 and played short and third base for Southwest Market, first half champions.

Walter (Jesse) James—23-year-old former Richmond star; right-handed pitcher, who won 12 out of 15 games for the Heurich Brewers, league champions and finalists in Post Association week-day championship play-offs.

National City "A" League.
(Nominated by President Vic Gauzza.)

Frank (Huck) Wynne—20-year-old former All-High star at Western; caught for Blue Flame Valets, NRA Eagles and Majestic Radio; hit close to .400; powerful physique, powerful, consistent hitter.

Fred Wahler—20-year-old shortstop for Miller Furniture; under observation of Detroit scouts; also played for Southwest Market in Industrial League; tall, lank, fast, right-handed batter; former player at Eastern High.

Charles Mackie—19-year-old southpaw for Warwick Athletic Club; nominated by President Vic Gauzza; said to be most effective of city's younger hurlers.

Louis P. Mathias—18-year-old right-handed hitter and catcher for Capital Transit Club; powerful thrower, consistent hitter.

One of the most powerful leagues in The Washington Post Sandlot Association—the Government loop—decided, through its secretary-treasurer, J. W. Leverton, to forego nominating a couple of Government League players this year because of obvious lack of potential big league material still young in years.

Leverton, who believes his league is the fastest in The Post Association, issued a statement in which he expressed appreciation of The Post policy of annually picking a sandlot star to be given a try-out with the Nats.

"I heartily indorse The Post's plan to send a player South," the official said, "but feel that of all the high class ball players in our league, many of whom have had minor league experience, none is young enough to embark on a big league career."

G. U. Prep Bows To Gonzaga In Upset

Mitchell Five Leads All Way to Triumph by 23-18 Score.

GONZAGA HIGH'S much-beaten team snapped out of it yesterday in its own gymnasium to tack a 23-18 defeat on Georgetown Prep in a prize upset of the season. The victory sent Gonzaga into second place in the Prep School League.

Tonight's scheduled game between Gonzaga and St. John's has been postponed until next week. The schools were unable to obtain the George Washington University gymnasium for the scene of action.

Coach Orrel Mitchell's quintet marked its distinct reversal of form by sweeping the favored Garrett Parkers to a defeat which saw Gonzaga lead in every period. With Dave Walsh, lanky center, holding Ed Cummings, Georgetown Prep pivotman to 1 point while scoring 8 himself to lead the point-making, Gonzaga zoomed to a lead of 8-4 in the first quarter; 12-8 at half-time, and 17-10 going into the final period.

A Charleston, W. Va., team will engage the Brewers at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow in the Heurich gym, and the following afternoon the Masked Marvels will oppose the beer boys at 3:30.

Two preliminary games will support both the Saturday and Sunday contests. Two girls teams—the Community Center All-Stars and United Typewriters—will meet Saturday.

Pros to Play In $3,000 Tourney

Wiffy Cox Is Among Golf Aces in Thomasville Open Event.

By the Associated Press.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Feb. 13.—Top-ranking golfers of the professional brigade making the round of the winter tournaments, including eight of the Nation's 10 leading money winners, polished their games on a rain-soaked course today in preparations for the opening tomorrow of the $3,000 Thomasville open.

Heavy rains swept the sporty Glenarven course today, leaving the greens and fairways soggy for the opening 18-hole round inaugurating play for top prize of $700.

Johnny Revolta, of Oshkosh, Wis., ranking money winner of 1935, headed the list of big prize-earners of last season, who are here. He was joined by Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa.; Horton Smith, of Oakpark, Ill.; Harry Cooper, of Chicago; Ky Laffoon, of Chicago; Victor Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J.; Harold McSpaden, of Kansas City, and Ray Mangrum.

Babe Ruth, who was expected for the tournament, wired from St. Petersburg, Fla., that he would be unable to attend because of his wife's illness.

Resettlement Five Holds G-Men to 2 Baskets

The Bureau of Investigation Basketball Team was held to two field goals last night by Resettlement Administration's league-leading five in the Government loop. A near-capacity crowd witnessed the game at the Central Y. M. C. A. Jimmy Howell, of Resettlement, with 14 points, ran his point total for the season up to 290 in 22 games.

College Fives Vie on Road Tonight

G. U. to Meet Carnegie; George Washington to Play Elkins.

A GENERAL exodus of the college boys from town leaves tonight's collegiate sports card as barren as a banker's bald pate. Nor will the local thrill-producing factories resume full-time operations until tomorrow night, when Catholic University's boxers square off with Pitt, while the Card courtmen journey out to College Park to help the Terps put on their annual "All-University" Night.

Georgetown is headed for the smokey environs of Pittsburgh, where it encounters Carnegie Tech tonight before moving on to play Penn State tomorrow, while George Washington's representatives will be in the same territory. The Colonials have a return engagement tonight with Davis-Elkins, while tomorrow finds them at Morgantown, invading West Virginia's bailiwick.

A. U. Goes South.

American University's dribblers are headed in the opposite direction under Coach Walter Young's tutelage. The Eagles will meet Bridgewater tonight on the Virginians' court.

In all three instances the Washington clubs have their hands full, for even Bridgewater is dynamite on its own floor. Georgetown will strive to avenge a previous whipping it took from the Plaid at Tech High School earlier in the season, but George Washington is out to make it two in a row over Davis-Elkins.

Howard Five Winner Over St. Paul, 61-33

Playing in championship form, the Howard University quintet defeated St. Paul College, of Lawrenceville, Va., last night on the university court, 61-33, before a crowd of 1,200, maintaining its lead in the colored intercollegiate conference.

Howard will meet Hampton here tomorrow night in an endeavor to avenge a defeat by 36-34 earlier in the season.

Army-Navy Sites Attacked in House

By the Associated Press.

The practice of playing virtually all of the Army-Navy football games on the Atlantic seaboard was attacked in the House yesterday by Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Misouri.

Cochran urged the games be played in other sections of the country, contending that Army and Navy officials "have no right" to confine the game to New York and Philadelphia.

"My own city of St. Louis and others throughout the Middle West and other sections of the country have facilities for the game and if they will come to St. Louis it won't cost them a cent for a place to play," said Cochran.

C. U. Boxers Seek Their Fifth Victory

Surprised at their own strength, so to speak, after decisively whipping Western Maryland's rugged ringmen last week, Catholic University's boxing team will seek its fifth victory of the season tomorrow night at Brookland where it faces the University of Pittsburgh at 9 o'clock.

Moved back until 9 o'clock to permit Catholic U. fans to see the Cardinals play Maryland in basketball at College Park at 7:30 o'clock, the match promises to be one of the best of the season.

Maryland Host In Double Bill Tomorrow

Courtmen to Oppose C. U.; Boxers Will Meet V. M. I. Team.

WITH Catholic University's basketball players and Virginia Military Institute's boxers supplying the competition, the University of Maryland teams in these branches of sport will supply the athletic features for tomorrow night's "All-University Night" program at College Park.

The 24-event card, which includes everything but a cow-milking contest, is scheduled to open promptly at 7:30 o'clock with the basketball game. Starting time for this was moved up not only to get the show over before midnight, but to enable Cardinal fans to get back to Brookland in time to see the Catholic U.-Pittsburgh match.

Birkland Is Hurt.

Maryland's hopes for victory in boxing were dealt a stunning blow last night when Johnny Birkland, heavyweight, lacerated his right ear in a fall down the ice-coated steps of the Arts and Science Building. He may be able to fight tomorrow, but it is doubtful if he will be used.

The Cadets do not boast the best ring team in the world, but they can be counted on for a dogged fight in every bout and the Terps will have to use their Sunday punch if they expect to win. Virtually the same team that fought North Carolina last week will appear for Maryland.

G. W. High, Eastern Enter Court Event

Eastern High and George Washington High, of Alexandria, both of which have been invited to play in the South Atlantic Interscholastic basketball championships, will be battling in the third annual Metropolitan high school tournament next week.

The two schools announced their entry in the event yesterday.

Lynch Plays Durand In Dixie Amateur Golf

Miami, Fla., Feb. 13 (AP).—Two veteran Simon-pures, Medalist Art Lynch, Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Celest Durand, Garden City, N. Y., shot sure-fire golf today to win their way to tomorrow's 36-hole final of the Dixie amateur tournament and make it an all-New York State affair.

Lynch was only one over par in medal score when he ended his match at the sixteenth hole, defeating Joe Switzer, St. Louis, 3 and 2. The Long Island player, never behind in his game, won smoothly from Bill Stembler, Miami, 4 and 3.

Woodward Prep Bows To Landon by 33 to 21

Led by Bobby Crocker, versatile football and basketball star, Landon Prep's court team lengthened its string of victories yesterday by topping Woodward Prep, 33 to 21, at Landon's gymnasium. Crocker accounted for 14 points, tossing five 2-pointers from the floor. Landon led 11-6 at half-time.

Eastern to Play Staunton Today

Although last place in the interhigh series will be hanging in the balance, the game between Central and Tech at Tech High today promises to be obscured by none other than Eastern's inter-high champions.

It seems the champs have scheduled a game with Staunton Military Academy and it promises to be a warmer attraction than the Central-Tech travesty. The Cadets come here with one of the most impressive records in Virginia prep school ranks. They played in the same tournament with Eastern last year in the South Atlantic Championships at Washington and Lee University.

The game will be played at Eastern's gymnasium, starting at 3:30 p. m. Eastern will be seeking to keep intact its string of victories over high and prep school ranks.

In the meantime, Central and Tech will be scrambling for the fourth place berth in the series, with Central a decided favorite in view of Tech's unfortunate shock to morale and men by announcement of the ineligibility of Jimmy Vermillion, forward.

It will be Tech's last game of the season and the last of the inter-high career of Capt. George Hahn and Walton Merchant.

Ceiling Triumphs in Hialeah Feature

Faust, Choice In Feature, Is Third.

Meade Is Up on Winner; Owaller in Triumph Over Juveniles.

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 13.—Two long shots showed the way home to the field of 3-year-olds engaged in the featured sixth race of 7 furlongs here today. Ceiling, representing the Southland Stable, and Joseph Pepp's Paralda greeted the judges as named, three parts of a length apart. The Wheatley Stable's oft-disappointing Faust, the favorite, was a half-length farther back.

Ceiling, ridden by Don Meade, made all his own pace and paid $21.60 for $2. The son of Ariel covered the distance in 1:25 3-5 under a mere 105 pounds and over a good track. It was another cloudy day following morning rain.

Of the 11 starters, all but Greek Idol, Flag Cadet and Combahee have been named for the Florida Derby.

Ceiling broke well in a bad start. The bay colt shook off Torita early and drew into a daylight lead after the first quarter. Paralda, close up from the break, challenged from the far turn home but Meade kept Ceiling going in a hard drive. Faust had no apparent excuse. His game final bid did not seriously menace the two outsiders.

Loschen in Victory.

Lolschen drove home in the 6-furlong fifth event to give form players their third score of the afternoon. The filly was nicely rated off the leaders to the top of the stretch. Apprentice Kastner shot the mount around the front runners at the final turn and the daughter of Grandacre gamely battled her way to the front. She clicked by three parts of a length and paid $5. Can Takit made up an immense gap to earn second money, three lengths clear of the fast but faltering Fairisk.

The canary and blue silks of Chicago's Mrs. Emil Denemark were borne to victory for the eighth time at the meeting when Owaller, heralded as the best filly and possibly the best juvenile in Florida, sped to her second straight triumph in three starts. The veteran Joe Renick broke the brown daughter of Blackwood on her toes and the even-money favorite drew away from the field in easy fashion, winning by two lengths. Her time for the 3 furlongs was 0:35. Moss Gal took the place by three lengths from Little Empress. The latter twerved in at the break and bumped Clouds.

SEMAPHORE, shaken up strongly to gain the lead goinig to the first turn, was attacked along until challenged, responded to punishment, but could not stall off the winner. MY PURCHASE offered stout contention for the first 7 furlongs then weakened gradually.

At the Post . . .

Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 13.

Dear Al:

Buddy Ensor came back to the racing wars today. Once one of the greatest jockeys. Ensor was accepting his first mount in almost three years and is attempting one of his numerous comebacks. Gray-haired now and admitting 36 years, Ensor donned the silks of J. E. Smallman to pilot Clarksdale. The horse showed no speed and finished last, but the boys in the press box noted that Ensor still retains his "seat." I will not be surprised if he begins to ride winners. Ensor, who has made several fortunes during his career, believes he still has the faculty of making horses run for him. At the height of his riding, Ensor specialized in long shots. Don Meade seems to have regained his best riding form. The E. R. Bradley rider turned in an excellent effort today in winning with Ceiling. This was his thirteenth winner of the meeting. Despite the fact that Bennings, Inc., had only two winners, we did not have a top horse out of the money during the day. Clocker Mike talked about making a show parlay on the seven of them but developed weak knees and threw his two bucks away on the daily double.

BILL.

First race—Airforce, from the Wheatley Stable, finds a spot here that promises a graduation. Stout has been assigned for the saddle work and I see no reason for mistakes. York is a brisk worker and probable choice. Town Crier to take care of the others.

Second race—Addis Ababa may be a morning glory and may be a good horse that will awake with a bang. I'm giving him another chance to come through with a real race. This one has set the clockers crazy. Patti will have Gilbert in the saddle and is dangerous. Hatty breaks off the rail.

Third race—Microphone should take this or keep right on running to the glue factory. He gets in with only a steadying 114 pounds and is sharp now. Tomorrow may be the day for Zay. This one has been kidding. Crowning Glory to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Swamp Angel is a possible long-shot winner of this mile. Likes the route and gets in light. I'm going to take a chance. Dnieper, despite that 118-pound assignment, is destined to be a keen factor. The Hare for the show.

Fifth race—Nectarine is the natural choice here, but I'm wondering if the $1,200 purse will make this fellow show his best effort. However, he is far too good now to be placed elsewhere. Quel Jeu and Old Story for the place and show. Clocker Mike likes the last-named.

Seventh race—Highest Point, El Puma and Exeter is the order in which I prefer them in the day's finale. Mike favors Capablanca, but I'm disgusted with the big horse.

Best bet—Highest Point.

Fifth District Sales Increase Ranks Near Top

January Gain of 11% Is Surpassed Only by Dallas District.

Department stores of the Sixth Federal Reserve District, which includes Washington, led all Federal Reserve districts except Dallas in sales gains in January, according to a statement by the Reserve Board governers yesterday. An increase of 11 per cent over January a year ago was reported by 55 stores in the Fifth District. The gain in the Dallas district was 15 per cent.

The Reserve Board reported that department store sales decreased by more than the usual seasonal amount in January, the board's seasonally adjusted index declining from 84 per cent of the 1923-5 average in December to 79 per cent in January.

In comparison with a year ago, however, the value of retail sales in January showed an increase of 1 per cent. Stores in all 12 districts, except Cleveland, reported sales increases over January, 1935. The percentage changes in the various districts follow:

| | Jan. | Stores. | Cities. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Total | + 7 | 480 | 237 |
| Reserve districts: | | | |
| Boston | + 8 | 51 | 29 |

January sales in Washington stores were 14.1 per cent ahead of January, 1935.

Dollar Rises Against Franc And Sterling

Foreign Opinion Is That U. S. Currency Has Been Undervalued.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—The dollar turned strong in foreign exchange trading today, moving sharply higher against the pound sterling and the gold bloc currencies.

Exchange experts said the demand for dollars reflected the opinion of financial centers abroad that the United States unit has recently been undervalued. This belief, they said, had been fostered by recent Washington statements that the United States Treasury would follow the path of financial orthodoxy.

In New York the pound sterling declined 1¾ cents to $4.98¼. The French franc cracked abruptly under the sudden preference for dollars and closed at 6.64¾ cents.

Weakness in the French currency, some pointed out, was in some measure attributable to the flare-up of political disturbances in Paris during which Leon Blum, chief of the Socialist Party, was attacked.

On the other hand, they said, the franc would likely have weakened anyway in terms of dollars in the general return of funds to dollars. The guilder and other gold bloc moneys also suffered wide losses.

Excess Reserves Decline in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board last night reported a series of factors which rendered the excess reserve situation less acute during the week ended February 12, Reserve balances shrinking by $85,000,000.

The board's weekly condition statement on Federal Reserve banks showed the total reserve balances of $5,784,000,000 still was $3,000,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

Factors attending the reduction, the statement revealed, included net gold exports of $13,000,000 during the week; increase of $21,000,000 in money in circulation, and the transfer of $35,000,000 of Treasury funds from member banks to reserve institutions.

Pool Cotton Offering Five Times Overbid

New Orleans, Feb. 13 (AP).—Bids for more than a quarter of a million bales of cotton were received by the Government today on the recent announcement that the cotton pool was planning to sell 50,000 bales of its holdings.

More than half of the cotton firms in the United States competed for the staple as 103 separate offers were received by the Government agency.

The Market

Leading Stocks Move Higher Despite Profit-Taking; Dollars Turn Strong.

New York, Feb. 13.—The holiday did not give the stock market much new energy, and after a cheerful opening prices moved irresolutely by fits and starts. On balance the day brought gains for leading issues. Turnover of around 2,900,000 shares was down sharply from that of Tuesday. Bonds were higher in all departments. May wheat closed ⅝ of a cent higher at 98⅛ cents a bushel.

Hearty invitations to buy stocks were given by Steel, with its opening at a new high price above 59, and by Telephone, also selling at a new high price. Several other leading stocks were strong in the early dealings, notably Western Union, Great Northern, Anaconda, General Electric, Consolidated Gas, Chrysler, Columbia Gas and New York Central. Profit taking began shortly after the opening and nervousness among the shorts grew less. In the afternoon some stocks that have been quiet for a spell came forward, in particular Radio, and trading ended with a sharp rally all around.

Soft spots uncovered showed lower prices for American Snuff which has rather a thin market at best, and for Weeson Oil. Both sold at new low prices. McKeesport touched a new low price, amid gossip of less activity among the can makers. Radio duplicated its worst price of the year and then rallied a point or more on increasing volume.

Railroad shares moved into the highest ground they have occupied in two years, with gains of 1 to 2 points for a half dozen. Colorado & Southern maintained buoyancy, Utilities held to large fractional gains. Most of the communications were strong. Trading sentiment was mixed for the mail orders, metals, equipments, steels, oils, amusements and accessories, although the motors came forward at the close and were accompanied by the airplanes. Kennecott Copper joined Anaconda in reaching a new high price. Leathers were sharply higher.

In the miscellaneous group, Atlas, Greyhound, Motor Wheel, Paraffine, U. S. Gypsum and Ruberoid climbed 1 to 3 points. A. O. Smith and Spiegel May Stern droped 2 points or so. American Can lost more than a point.

Francs Depressed.

In the foreign exchange market the strong advance of the dollar, which took place yesterday while our markets were closed, continued today. Only about half the sharp gains of today in this market were wholly the result of today's trading. Dollars rose about 1¼ cents against sterling, and the gain over francs was a little more in proportion.

It is likely that the recent shipments of gold, some of which have now arrived in Europe, have had the effect of simmering down the speculative ardor against dollars among those who felt another burst of dollar depreciation was about to take place. Another factor which doubtless worked to depress the franc was the outbreak of violence among the Monarchist and Socialist leaders at the funeral of the French historian, Jacques Bainville, when a radical leader attempted to drive through the funeral procession. The episode was seized upon as a pretext for attacking the present ministry, and consequently a situation already rather delicate was worsened.

Meanwhile no fresh indication has come from Washington that a change of heart in the latest veering away from inflation has taken place. Gold export permits are being issued and sales of the metal to foreign governments are taking place. The Federal Reserve Board Advisory Council has repeated its recommendation for a reduction in excess bank reserves. It won't follow necessarily that the new board will be any more receptive to such advance than was the old one, but at least the matter is up for decision.

Trade Advances.

In this section bankers are in two camps on the matter, both agreeing that the real insurance against inflation lies in budget balancing. On that subject, while a hint has been given that the Government wishes to reduce expenditure, the problems brought up by the soldiers bonus and the farmers doles remain to be solved.

On the business side the week is bringing some cause for hopefulness. The steel industry is moving ahead, after its nap of the past month or more. Operations are rising and the price of scrap is hardening, usually a good sign. Building construction is expected to go forward with the opening of warmer weather and the motor industry continues optimistic of spring business. Inflation at most probably is a matter of months or even years, while the conviction deepens daily that the tide of trade recovery is bound to flow for a long time.

Seat Sales.

Stock Exchange membership prices seem to have struck a snag around $173,000 a throw. Another transfer at that figure was announced this morning. The Curb Exchange is breaking into new ground. One of its seats was sold today for $47,000, a rise of $4,500 over the last previous sale and the best price paid since 1933. The curb market has been an extremely broad and active one for the past weke or more, and the SEC is putting up a fight for increasing, or at least maintaining, the curb's unlisted stock activities. Now that stocks are mounting to respectable prices on the stock exchange a portion of the public that goes in for low-priced issues is finding room for its overflow in the curb's highly assorted list of this and that.

Gold for Silver.

The dollar depreciation fund operated largely with silver between the time of the silver purchase act and the recent debacle in the silver situation that sent China off the silver standard. Since then the Treasury has returned to the exchange of gold for silver. The most recent operation, the earmarking for China of nearly ten millions in gold for the purchase of that much "worth" of silver, emphasizes the point. Apparently the Treasury is assisting China to maintain a managed paper currency with metal backing.

Same Old Game.

Now that Head Commissioner Landis of SEC is fighting to save the lives, as he calls it, of the small exchanges, and particularly of the New York Curb Exchange, some unwelcome publicity is being given the action of Middle West Utilities Co. stock, actively traded in on the Curb. The press today carried the report that the trustee for the company had been given permission by the courts to discontinue transfer facilities for the stock. That usually ends trading on any exchange, and this morning dealings on the Curb in Middle West were suspended. The turnover in the stock in the past week was more than 500,000 shares. The stock also was active on the Chicago Stock Exchange. SEC, it was reported, traced most of the work here to one brokerage firm and expressed surprise that any one should be led to pay to three times the value of the stock.

Cold Days Drive Egg Prices Higher

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—The cumulative effect of a month or more of severe weather which has crippled transportation as well as materially curtailing ordinary farm activities, was reflected in a sharp advance in the price of eggs today. All standard grades in the New York market were marked up from 4 to 5 cents a dozen, carrying prices to the highest average levels since last November.

White eggs, nearby and Midwest, exchange specials, were quoted at 34 to 35 cents a dozen, exchange standards at 33 to 34 cents, and brown eggs, special packs, were listed at 35 to 36 cents.

Residential building led the list with a 92 per cent increase. Impressive as these percentage gains are, building permits last year totaled less than one-fifth the permits in 1928, a normal year.

Wages Three Times Profits, Fleming Says

A. B. A. Head Backs Private Against Government Ownership.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—Defending the profit and loss system as against public ownership, Robert V. Fleming, president of the American Bankers Association, today told the Advertising Club of New York that, for every dollar of profit made by American business men in the years 1923 to 1933, "at least $3 were paid in wages and salaries."

Speaking at a luncheon of the advertising organization, Mr. Fleming said:

"Profit is the reward for managerial skill which can avoid the pitfalls in every business enterprise. It goes to those who have initiative, training and character. But an examination of failures in American business would, I think, convince anyone that every business enterprise has inherent in it the possibilities of loss as well as profit, and that profit is the incentive which stimulates people to render greater service in order to justify confidence in what they have to offer."

Taxes Make Up Deficit.

"Under a system of public ownership," he added, "loss is generally carried as current deficit, and after several years of current deficits, taxes in some fields of activity are raised to offset the deficit. But in the American system of profit and loss, the losses are shared by the individual who fails in his enterprise and by his creditors. They are not passed on to the public in the form of taxation.

"I contend that the plain facts of the case show, therefore, that we do not have a profit system which robs people or which upsets the economic order. Our profit and loss system is one which rewards initiative, good service and character. It pays out in wages and salaries three times what it makes in profits. It penalizes through losses those who do not measure up to the standards of achievement established in our system of free enterprise."

Scrap-Steel Price At Five-Year High

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—The price of Pittsburgh No. 1 heavy melting steel scrap today advanced 25 cents a ton to $14.75@$15.25 a ton, the highest since October, 1930.

Chicago heavy melting steel scrap advanced nominally as the result of heavy snows, which curtailed the movement of material. In some quarters the marketing was quoted at $13.75@$14.25 a ton, up 25 cents, although the last sale to a mill was reported at $14.

Culbertson on Bridge

(Mr. Culbertson is acting as referee and reporter for a "grudge" bridge game. By general agreement he fines the players for their errors according to degree of stupidity. Class A errors cost them $1; class B, $2.50; class C, $5; class D, $10.)

"WELL," said West cheerfully, "this isn't a bad idea at all! I've had rotten cards and should be a considerable loser. But actually I've paid only one minimum fine and now have a 25 per cent equity in a $19 kitty."

"Better do your gloating now," growled South. "Your turn will come!"

As it happened, the next hand fulfilled the prophecy.

West, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

| West | North | East | South |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | 1 diamond | Pass | 2 clubs |
| Pass | 2 diam'ds | Pass | 2 no tr'p |
| Pass | 3 no tr'p (final bid) | | |

West opened his fourth highest heart, dummy played low, and East's king won. The heart lead was returned, declarer winning with the jack, and the diamond suit was cleared, West taking the ace. West proceeded to clear his heart suit by leading the third round. But he had taken his last trick, the diamond suit was run off, and followed by five tricks in clubs. The contract was fulfilled with two extra tricks.

West must have realized his guilt, because I could see him looking apprehensively at me.

"You were a little premature in your gloating," I said to him. "That defense will cost you just $5—and I'm being lenient at that."

"Whta should I have done?" asked West, considerably chastened.

"You should have estimated the opponents' probable tricks more accurately! You actually could see four diamond and two heart tricks, and certainly there was a poor chance, considering the bidding, that East could stop the club suit. You should have abandoned the hearts as a hopeless proposition and shifted to a low spade."

Taylor Named Treasury Aid By President

Chicago Man to Succeed Robert as Assistant Secretary.

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to the Senate the name of Wayne C. Taylor, of Chicago, to succeed L. W. Robert as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. Robert's resignation became effective Saturday.

Taylor has been a part of the Roosevelt Administration since July, 1933, when he was named executive assistant to the administrator of the AAA. In April, 1934, he became assistant to George N. Peek, who was then special adviser to the President in foreign trade. Since July 1, 1935, he has been vice president of the Export-Import Bank, formerly headed by Peek.

Taylor was graduated from Yale University in 1916. Following his graduation he joined the staff of the Central Republic Trust Co., of Chicago, under Charles G. Dawes. In 1920 he became a partner in Marshall Field, Glore, Ward & Co., investment bankers. From 1927 to 1931 he was vice president of the reorganized firm of Field, Glore & Co.

The new Assistant Secretary was born in 1893. He is married and has four children.

The Taylor appointment will fill one of the two vacancies in the Treasury. The other was caused by the resignation of Thomas Jefferson Coolidge as Undersecretary. Eugene R. Black, jr., of Atlanta, has been mentioned as his possible successor.

Two Plead Guilty In Holdup of Bank

Baltimore, Feb. 13 (AP).—Pleas of guilty were entered today by two Baltimoreans whose attempt to rob a Union Trust Co. branch bank here was nipped in the bud by police before the would-be robbers could act.

They are Jene Maganni and Cornelius Johnson, a Negro. Judge Charles F. Stein deferred sentence until next Thursday, pending an investigation as to Maganni's mental state.

Clement W. Crooks, bank manager, testified he and two other employes were held up at gun-point and forced to enter the vault. As the vault key was turned, it automatically sounded an alarm that called officers. The pair was captured.

Grafton Mayor Recall Asked in 20 Petitions

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Grafton, W. Va., Feb. 13.—The recall of Mayor E. Otto Waugh is sought in 20 petitions which today are being circulated for signatures. Twenty per cent of the voters of the city, or a total of 790 signers, is required before the petitions can be presented to the city council, which must then order an election for mayor.

The movement is the first of the kind since the adoption of the commission form of government in 1914. There has been friction between the mayor and a group of business house managers for some time, and the recent change in superintendency of the Grafton City Hospital was cited as adding dissatisfaction with the mayor.

Waugh has not indicated whether he will enter the race should an election be ordered.

Mexican Workers Ask Plant Control

Mexico City, Feb. 13 (AP).—Federal electrical workers of the capital are preparing a petition asking the government to hand over the management of electrical plants to them, it was leraned tonight.

They also will attempt to force the fusion of Mexico's double telephone system. One company is a subsidiary of the International Telephone & Telegraph and the other is controlled by European capital.

As a result of the intervention of President Lazaro Cardenas, a threatened strike of employes of a big smelting company in Monterrey was called off, the company agreeing to sign a collective contract.

Another strike, at the Vidriera glass factory, was still unsettled. The president said he intended to remain in Monterrey until the walkout is settled.

Meanwhile, a strike here against the "Anfora" factory, which supplies German retail stores with many products, spread to five more stores. Police were called out to restore order.

Girl Cleared at Inquest After Traffic Fatality

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated Miss Nettie Conway, 1457 Park road northwest, from blame in the traffic death of Mary F. Edwards, 70, of 2717 Ontario road northwest.

Mrs. Edwards was struck at Sixteenth and Pine streets northwest, December 15. She was taken to Emergency Hospital and treated for a fractured leg and shoulder. She died February 2.

At the inquest, witnesses told the jury Mrs. Edwards had walked into the street from behind parked automobiles.

Hunters Are Sentenced To Feed 1,000 Ducks

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—Two brothers convicted of shooting two ducks on frozen Jamaica Bay in violation of the game laws were sentenced today to feed the flock of 1,000 there instead of hunting them.

The brothers, Peter and Joseph Misi, demured that they had large families, were receiving home relief and could not afford to feed the ducks. Courtroom spectators took up a collection, however, and financed the purchase of 100 pounds of grain.

Stockyards Hydrogen Gas Plant Blows Up; One Man Missing.

Chicago, Feb. 13.—A stockyards blast which razed the hydrogen plant of Swift & Co. caused the death of two workmen and serious injuries to at least a half dozen others today.

Salvage workers recovered the body of a man identified by the coroner's office as Daniel McLean, 27, a machinist, and Walter Erickson, 38, a laborer, died from his injuries in the Wesley Memorial Hospital.

Search was made also for William Blake, a foreman, who was missing and believed to have been buried under the debris in the wrecked one-story building.

In addition, hospital authorities said that M. Butrenas, 43, a laborer, was believed dying and that the condition of George C. Ackerman, 41, a supervisor, who had attempted to avert the blast with the help of another worker, was critical.

A leak in the hydrogen gas pipe, officials said, probably caused the blast, which blew out the building "like a box," according to witnesses. Firemen estimated the damage at $100,000, though company officials said the building was old and of not much value.

Windows in a score of taverns and other buildings adjacent were shattered and extra fire and police units were rushed to the scene at the first alarm.

First warning of the trouble came when Ackerman and his companion heard a sizzling sound from a leak in the pipe to the storage tank on the roof. They rushed to the roof and were trying to shut off the valves when the building fell out from under them.

bills was revealed for the first time last night in a statement by Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes. It said, in part:

"The National Federation of Federal Employes stands four-square for the leave bills as originally passed by the House of Representatives. We believe that the House bills, providing for 120 days cumulative sick and annual leave, are eminently fair. Curtailment of this provision to 60 days we are convinced is demonstrably a less sound provision.

"Proposed deletion entirely of section 3 of the annual leave bill as passed by the House is a decided impairment of the efficiency of the measure. That employes should be compensated for overtime work is a principle well recognized everywhere. The House measure was satisfactory in this respect.

"Furthermore, the proposal of the Senate committee to set the effective date for both annual and sick leave measures as July 1, 1936, cannot, we feel, be justified. The intolerable leave conditions which now exist should be terminated as soon as is feasible and practicable.

"Surely there is no need to postpone that remedial action until July. The legislation should be effective as of no later than January. It will be recalled that for a full two-year period, all apnual leave was suspended. That fact certainly should be weighed in the setting of the effective date of new and desperately needed leave legislation."

The American Automobile Association issued a statement to the effect that the committee's decision not to count Sundays and holidays in annual leave has removed the threat of a serious traffic hazard. The effect of such a provision, the statement said, would have been to increase the amount of traffic on the highway on Saturdays and Sundays.

Ford V-8 Economy is Only Half the Story Says Washington Cab Fleet Owner

LOW UPKEEP AND HIGH RESALE VALUE ALSO MAKE FORD V-8 BEST

C. B. RYAN, PRESIDENT, Yellow Cab Company, Washington, D. C., says:
"There is no question but what the cold, hard facts single out the Ford V-8 as the most economical in the long run."

"Give me a Ford V-8 any time—because it's easy on gas and oil—easy to drive—easy to park—and quick on the get-away."

Read What a Washington Cab Fleet Owner Says:

"When I buy cars for taxi service I don't have to guess—I know," says C. B. Ryan, President, Yellow Cab Company, Washington, D. C. "I keep accurate books for all expense items—I know for each car the mileage, the amount of gas and oil consumed, the tire expense, repairs, the original cost price of the car, and, when I come to sell it, the trade-in value."

"I have had nearly all light makes of cars in my fleet, and there is no question but what the cold, hard facts single out the Ford V-8 as the most economical in the long run. My cabs each run about 4,500 miles a month, more than the average private owner would run in half a year. These cabs are Fordor Sedans and are identical with the regular passenger model except for the yellow-and-black paint job. In spite of the fact that these cars are in motion nearly 24 hours a day, with all kinds of drivers, my total Ford V-8 repair bill in the past 8 months averaged only $6.19 per car, the average mileage being approximately 36,000 miles."
